Farmers Buy Packing Plant

BY MIRIAM GREENFIELD
Lebanon Co. Staff Correspondent

SHAMOKIN – "It's a great day or agriculture," Keith Eckel, resident of Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, said Wednesday morning in Shamokin. Eckel presented a plaque to Eugene Eisenbise of Hershey, president of PennMar Coop, a cooperative of 64 central Pennsylvania farmers– hog and cattle producers– who recently acquired the Shamokin Packing Co.

"The future of our marketing endeavor hangs in the balance," Eckel said. He was referring to the new role of the farmer, the evolution of the farmer from just producing food, to processing and marketing the food and getting it to the consumer.

We used to think of the farmer's job as a job very distant from the consumer, but Milestone Brands Cooperative, a division of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association has just taken the first step in bringing the farmer's role more in touch with the consumer. From now on, farmers will be processing and marketing as well as producing the food we eat.

The Shamokin Packing Company, which had been producing Chief brand hot dogs, hams, kielbasa, and other processed meat for over 25 years at the Shamokin site, will continue to operate under the ownership of PennMar Cooperative Inc. PennMar is a group of 64 central Pennsylvania hog and cattle producers who have incorporated to control processing and marketing as well as growing food.

PennMar acquired the Shamokin plant April 7 with the cooperation of the Pennsylvania Cooperative Marketing Association (PACMA) and Milestone Brands Cooperative, both divisions of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association. Royal Palmer, director of sale for Milestone Brands Cooperative, which includes PennMar and PACMA, said the plant manager Richard Bobkoskie and the 77 persons who

Milk Promotion at Penn State

Ready to show the milk promotion trophy, Joe Paterno (left), coach of the Penn State Nittany Lions, and Donald Duncan, Chairman of the State Advisory Board of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, kick off the milk promotion program last Saturday at the Penn State Blue & White football game.

The hand crafted milk can trophy will be awarded each year to the winner of the Penn State-Pitt football game on a rotating basis. In addition, a duplicate milk can will go to the winner of the Penn State-Temple game.

While these large trophies will move from college to college as the winner emerges, small replicas of the milk can will go to each player to keep as part of his college memorabilia.

2nd Conservation Reserve Signup Begins Monday

HARRISBURG – Farmers who ussed the boat the first time round will have a second chance hop aboard the Conservation eserve Program as of Monday. ccording to ASCS conservation rogram specialist, Richard ennay, the second CRP sign-up eriod will begin Monday, May 5 nd end May 16.

The goal of CRP is too take the ation's highly erodible land out of ultivation. By removing more an 40 million acres of this arginal land from food roduction in the coming decade, SDA hopes to lower soil erosion hile reducing crop surpluses.

Another benefit of the program, ccording to SCS resource conervationist Richard Heidecker, ill be the creation of higher uality wildlife habitat. Since CRP creage must be converted to ermanent vegetative cover, such s grasses and trees, "this resents an ideal time to improve ildlife food and cover on farms," ys Heidecker.

Wildlife returns the benefits to rmers through insect control. ome birds eat their weight in sects daily, Heidecker says.

Farmers will receive annual ental payments after Oct. 1 of ach calendar year for acreage at qualifies. CRP acreage may not be farmed for 10 years.

In addition to annual rental payments, farmers can receive 50 percent of the cost of establishing permanent cover on the land.

In determining acceptable bids, USDA divided Pennsylvania into two bidding pools. Pool 1 included the southeastern part of the state, where the maximum acceptable bid was $65. The remainder of the state was labeled pool 2, with a maximum bid of $60.

During the March sign up, 397 bids were submitted on 13,662 acres, but only 2,463 acres on 93 farms were accepted. This was a long way from ASCS's goal of 82,000 acres during the initial sign-up.

Nationally, bids were accepted for 838,356 acres on 10,307 farms. The average price for all bids accepted was $41.82.

Penn State extension economist William McSweeny thinks that the dairy herd buy-out program may well have contributed to CRP's anemic performance, since the buy-out sign-up overlapped CRP's signup period. "Farmers may find they have more time now to give the Conservation Reserve Program serious consideration," McSweeny said.

Those interested in the program should contact their county ASCS offices.

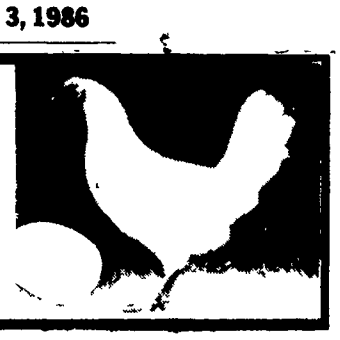
POULTRY MARKETS



Philadelphia Eggs

Thursday, May 1, 1986
Report Supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices were unchanged to higher on large and extra large, unchanged on mediums. Cartoned egg movement was fair to occasionally fairly good and generally showing improvement from early week. Floor stocks of large and extra large ranged adequate to closely cleared. Mediums were at least adequate or available. Additional offerings of graded products were noted as adequate. However, ungraded packs of class ones and twos were tight and in demand. Lighter weight eggs were building and in some instances noted as surplus.

Eastern PA and NJ Poultry

Wednesday, April 30, 1986
Report Supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices were unchanged to slightly higher. Off-farm movement was tapering a bit, but combined with previous committments was sufficient to maintain full processing schedules. Canner movement was light and prices somewhat negotiable in an effort to stimulate sales during a period of lighter buying interest. The undertone was at least steady.

Prices Paid at Farm:

F.O.B. Plant: 8½-9½, mostly 9-9½.

Delmarva Poultry

Thursday, May 1, 1986

Market Comment: Demand for ready to cook whole birds remained slow, and discounting was a prime factor in effecting clearances at several plants. Demand in the parts complex continued to center on tight supplies of legs and particularly leg quarters. Wings were in fairly good balance. The earlier calls for cutlets continued to keep this supply clearing while rib-on and line-on breasts were trading at lower trending prices.

Live supplies were moderate. Weights were mixed but generally desirable. Slaughter schedules were moderate. The undertone was weak.

Estimated slaughter of broiler fryers in Delmarva:

Estimated 5/01 1,899,000; Actual 4/24 1,980,000.

Actual 4/29 1,949,000.

Average Weights 4/29 4.36, 4/22 4.50.

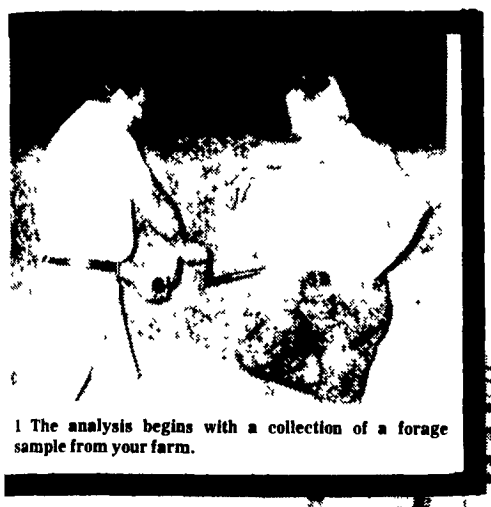
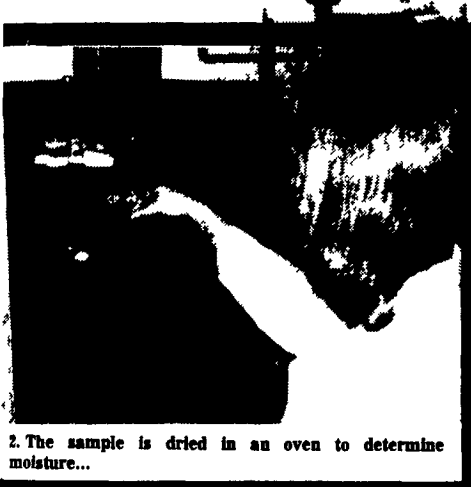
ACCURATE FORAGE TESTING GIVES YOU A MORE RELIABLE DAIRY FEEDING PROGRAM

Not all testing is the same. The accuracy of your results depends on the thoroughness and professionalism of the people performing the analysis, and the precision of the testing equipment used.

In our Technical Services Laboratory, located in Lancaster, we perform more than 5,000 forage analyses a year for farms like yours, in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware. This service enables you to learn the exact nutrient values of your homegrown forages so that we can work with you to develop your best feeding program.

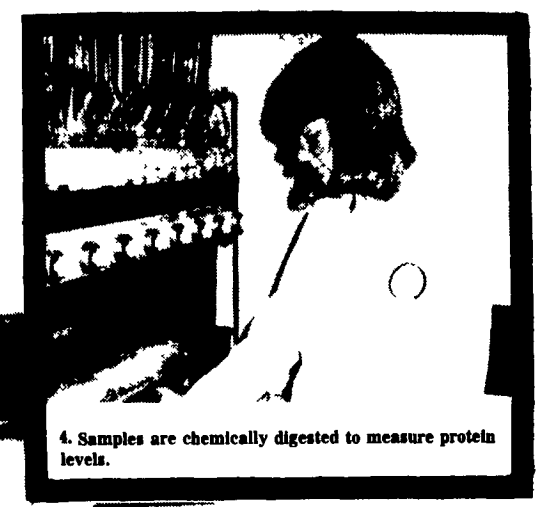


1 The analysis begins with a collection of a forage sample from your farm.

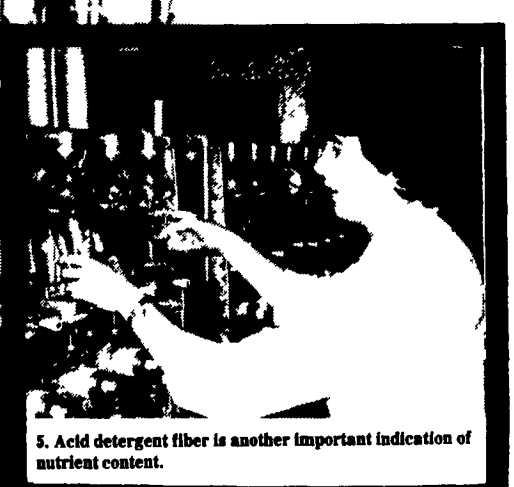


2. The sample is dried in an oven to determine moisture...

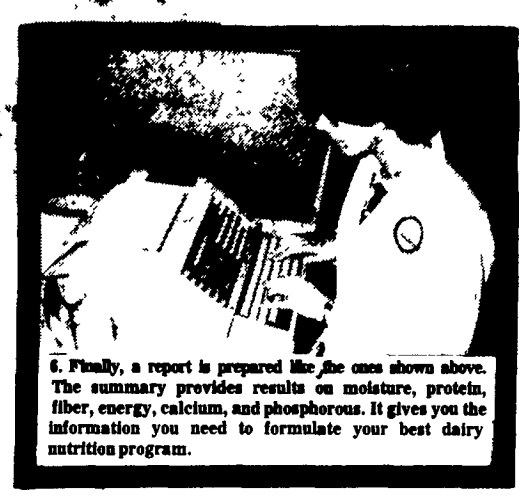
3. A sample is weighed seven times during the procedure to gather data.



4. Samples are chemically digested to measure protein levels.



5. Acid detergent fiber is another important indication of nutrient content.



6. Finally, a report is prepared like the ones shown above. The summary provides results on moisture, protein, fiber, energy, calcium, and phosphorous. It gives you the information you need to formulate your best dairy nutrition program.

Maximum feed efficiency and improved nutrition are two reasons for choosing Pennfield Dairy Program. Dairymen, you can count on Pennfield... for a better bottom line.

Ask the Old Farmer: Any idea where the expression 'White Elephant originated? One hears it referring to unwanted goods, yet, the albino elephant of the jungles is considered a rarity How come? A S , Madison, Wisc In Siam, which was in the Far East the white elephant was pretty nigh sacred So sacred, in fact, that a small army of men was kept busy caring for the critter and keeping him fed In return the elephant merely looked pleasant and allowed folks to look at him As far as we know, the expression came from this mite of history, referring to something expensive to maintain and just about useless

Lancaster Farming

OPINION

Service to Agriculture

Twenty-five years of service to agriculture. That's what Arnold Lueck, associate county agent from Lancaster has done. If you have a wilty alfalfa stalk or need to know which side of the house to plant a flowering shrub, you can always call the extension service and ask for Arnie. Arnie is the name he is affectionately called by his friends.

Lueck joined Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service in 1961 and was especially helpful in agronomy and horticultural programs. Helping farmers who grow corn, alfalfa, potatoes, tobacco, celery, grapes and apples. Lueck's programs also have been designed for home gardners, 4-H clubs and agri business representatives. Lueck is well-known and well-received with his weekly newspaper columns and radio broadcasts.

With all of the fine effort this county agent has brought to agriculture, we want to, on behalf of the agricultural community, say a big thank you, Arnie.

Solute to Farmers

In 1984, one out of every forty-one Americans lived on the farm. That amounted to nearly 1½% of the total U.S. population. Back in 1920 when the farm population was first counted as a separate group, over 30% lived on farms. By 1950 the proportion had fallen to around 15%.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, 2.3 million farmers provide food and fiber for 271 million people–201 million in the U.S. and 70 million overseas. One farmer provides food and fiber for 116 people. That figure of 116 is up from 73 in 1970 and 46 in 1960. The average person in America eats 1,426 pounds of food per year. Three ounces a day more than 20 years ago. The most popular food in total pounds sold is whole milk, 123 pounds per person annually.

It would seem that the farmer is rather small when it comes to numbers in relation to population. But when it comes to producing food, us farmers look pretty large. In fact it probably wouldn't be out of place to solute ourselves as masters of food production in the world.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Practice Pesticide Safety

Pesticides are very important to our highly efficient agriculture. When used as directed, they repay our growers with higher, better quality yields at minimal risk to our safety and health.

- It's important to choose the correct pesticides and application equipment for your particular problem.
- Be sure to read and follow the label directions. Make sure all coworkers do the same.
- Without fail, use the recommended personal protective equipment to prevent harmful contact with chemicals.
- Mix chemicals accurately and carefully. Clean up spills. Return unused materials to safe storage.
- Triple rinse and drain empty containers into the spray tank.
- Clean the equipment when you have finished. Don't smoke or eat until you have washed and changed clothing.
- Store pesticides in their original labeled containers in a locked cabinet, room or building.

Let's have a safe growing and harvesting season this year.

To Prepare for Soybean Planting

Soybeans should be planted in warm moist soil. A thermometer will help you decide when is the best planting date. Special bayonet type thermometers work very well.

The ideal soil temperature is about 62°F. The reading should be taken at about 8 a.m. when the soil temperature is stabilized. The thermometer should be inserted at least two inches in the soil.

Many people planting soybeans will either end up with too many plants per acre or too few. This will happen because they will use the pounds per acre philosophy, which won't work for soybeans. Because soybean seed differs greatly in size, this also means they differ greatly in number of seeds per pound. For example, one variety may average 2,100 seeds per pound, while another variety averages 3,100 seeds per pound...that's a difference of 1,000 seeds per pound. So, if you plant a bushel of seed with 85 percent germination, that's a difference of about 48,000 plants per acre.

The only way to plant beans is by seeds per foot of row. If a grain drill is used, three beans per foot of row is plenty. If a 30-inch corn row is used eight to nine beans per foot is about right

To Check Farm Ponds

Many ponds will be showing both algae and weed infestation build-up as the weather gets warmer, and yes these pond plants will begin to grow. Permits are needed in order for the owner to use the proper material, and to protect livestock downstream from the pond. Before any ponds are treated in Pennsylvania with any chemical or fertilizer, the owner should obtain a permit from the Pennsylvania Fish Commission. Application for the permit is available from the Pennsylvania Waterway Patrol Office or from our Penn State Extension Office.

To Help Prevent Damping-off of Seedlings

Damping-off of seedlings is a common concern of plant growers. It may start with a single seedling and move rapidly through the flats or bed. Growers can prevent losses from damping-off by following good control or prevention practices.

Good damping-off prevention practices include the use of clean or treated seed, sterilized soil or disease-free plant media, clean containers, water and tools.

Watering plants in the morning when the temperature is rising will provide good drying conditions and also aid in preventing losses from those disease organisms that may be in the soil.

Dear Editor,

Your excellent article, "A Dairyman in Buyout Shares His Thoughts", should be shared by the nonfarmer people. Have you considered offering it to the Lancaster papers or the "Philadelphia Inquirer" that ran headlines on how much the big farmers will be getting, but no insight on what it involves?

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE DEVIL TO PAY
May 4, 1986

Background Scripture: Matthew 12:22-32; Luke 11:5-13.
Devotional Reading: John 3:3-15.

I never heard much about the Devil when I was growing up. As a matter of fact, even when I was a theological student in seminary, references to the Devil were few and far between. But in the past two decades, the Devil, it would seem, has made quite a comeback. To be sure, there are some Satanic religious cults that have grabbed occasional headlines and the motion picture studios have worked the Devil and other demons for all they are worth at the box office.

DEMONIC P.R.

Actually, however, it is none of the above who have brought the Devil to his current state of infamous reknown, but multitudes of unwittig Christians, who seem to spend so much of their time looking under their neighbor's bed for the Devil that God himself gets far less of their attention. Christians have found that warning others about the Devil is more fun than witnessing to the grace of Jesus Christ. They have found that there is no better "put down" to another person than to suggest or outright accuse them of consorting with demonic powers. And, as quite a few have found out to their financial gain, the Devil also sells books.

Ah yes, some may say, that is the price we must pay for vigilance against the demonic, for we are safest from the Devil when we are most aware of his presence. And thus they rationalize their tireless public relations efforts that keep the Devil alive and well in the popular consciousness. Thus, they justify their self-righteous attacks upon other Christians so that they might keep them from becoming "unwitting tools of the Devil."

"ONLY BEELZEBUL"

It is important to remember that Pharisees also tried to discredit Jesus by using the same kind of charge. When he healed a dumb demonic, they tried to counter the amazement of the people saying, "It is only by Beelzebul, the prince of demons, that this man casts out demons" (Matt. 12:24). No other accusation ever brought so devastating a reply from Jesus. By robbing the Devil of his wretched human victims, says Jesus, he is actually plundering the Devil's "household" and evidencing the presence of the Kingdom of God in their midst.

Jesus goes on to utter some words that are probably the harshest he ever spoke: "...every sin and blasphemy will be forgiven men, but the blasphemy against the Spirit...whoever speaks it against the Holy Spirit will not be forgiven, either in this age or in the age to come" (12:31-32). This is, for Jesus, the worst of sins–as one commentator puts it, "that malignant moral blindness which deliberately affirms that which is good is evil."

Thus, to condemn our neighbor and his faith as "of the Devil" may put us in the position of blaspheming God's Holy Spirit. Then we will really have the Devil to pay.

A waste byproduct in the manufacture of corn sweeteners has the unusual ability, after simple chemical treatment, to remove the major sources of bitterness in grapefruit juice and navel orange juice. The product is called cyclodextrin polymer, and its donut-shaped molecules actually trap the bitterness molecules inside their holes, where they are held by a weak chemical bond. Later, the bonds can be loosened with a chemical wash and the bitterness molecules removed. The cyclodextrin, which is unchanged by the process, is subject to Food and Drug Administration approval before it can be used commercially.

diesels to repower your equipment

From Evergreen Engines

Evergreen Engines Company has been the distributor for John Deere diesel engines in Eastern Pennsylvania since 1979. During that period, we have repowered or replaced the engine in most models of machines manufactured by Deere, both agricultural and industrial.

We have been active in the OEM marketplace both in new equipment and repowering or replacing engines in used OEM equipment. We have worked with many different types of equipment, such as irrigation pumps, electric generators, conveyors, fire equipment, air compressors, and various construction and agricultural machines manufactured by companies other than Deere.

We try to maintain an inventory of 70 new engines on hand at all times, and pride ourselves on fast (usually 24 to 48 hours) delivery.

We maintain our own in-house fuel injection pump room and a complete parts inventory.

We now offer a generous core credit exchange on your old engine.

At Evergreen, we deliver....from application engineering to follow up service.

No-Till Equipment Offered To Help Montgomery Farmers

CREAMERY – The Montgomery County Conservation District announces a host of equipment to assist county farmers in trying no-till this year.

The no-till equipment available is as follows:

2-10' wide drills- 7" spacing
1-4 row 30" cornplanter
2-4 row 38" cornplanters
1-6 row 30" cornplanter

The county is primarily offering a 6 row planter to give farmers equipped for 6 row harvesting a chance to try no-till.

Since the County is still looking for a No-Till Specialist, Edward Brzostek, District Conservationist for the USDA, Soil Conservation Service will be coordinating the program and giving advice on no-tilling Mark Teaford of Fairview Village, farmer and seasoned no-tiller, has been temporarily hired to assist on no-till field set-ups and maintenance work at least until the no-till position is filled.

To date, over 80 different county farmers have used the county no-till program. The program gives the farmer a first hand look at how various planters work before they purchase their own equipment. Although most program participants plan to lease District equipment another year or two, many have purchased new equipment from seeing how they worked under the lease rental program.

The District hopes to someday phase out the no-till program, but until custom planting or leasing becomes more available, the District sees an important need to assist its farmers to reduce soil erosion through the program.

Information on no-tilling and equipment leasing arrangements is available through calling the Montgomery County Conservation District at 489-4506.

Ag College Seeks Old Photos, Documents

The Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station is looking ahead to its 100th birthday in 1988 and is already planning a celebration. As part of that effort Dr. Donald Crossan, station director and dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at the University of Delaware, is seeking old photographs, reports, and other printed materials that relate to farming and agricultural research.

A few old glass negatives were discovered in the attic of a university building several years ago, and have been saved. But Crossan believes there are many photographs and documents from the late 1800s and early 1900s in private collections.

Crossan is looking for all kinds of agriculturally oriented material, especially involving the experiment station, the University of Delaware farm, and agricultural research and extension workers from the university.

Anyone having such materials is encouraged to contact the Office of Agricultural Communications, Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19717-1303. Arrangements will be made to examine the materials and secure copies or otherwise transfer the information. All materials will be handled carefully and returned to the lenders.

Plans are now under way to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station, and will focus on the period between March 1887, when federal legislation funding the nationwide program was enacted, and May 1888, when Delaware's station was actually organized.

PennMar Acquires Shamokin Plant

were employed by Shamokin Packing will continue to operate the plant. "We plan to increase the work force from 77 to 100 or 125 by the end of the fiscal year," Palmer said. "We have increased the processing production 100% since its purchase April 7, and out target is to increase it 200% by the end of the year."

According to Palmer, 154,000 hogs and 4,700 beef animals are already contracted to be processed this year. Since the plant will have a capacity for 7,800 beef animals, Palmer expects to contract for 3,100 more choice and prime cattle. "We are adding refrigeration space and we are also in the process of purchasing $250,000 worth of equipment for processing new products," Palmer said.

"We're thrilled that this plant is operating and growing," said Paul (Hap) Schatz, representing Congressman Paul E. Kanjorski. "We're happy for the agriculture industry– the largest industry in the 11th Congressional District. I had been a fulltime farmer for 10 years, and this is one of the better things I've seen happen for the farming community which is up against hard times," Schatz said.

"Agriculture is a three-way hitch: production, processing, and marketing," according to Eugene Eisenbise who conceived of the cooperative project in 1979. There is "a whole series of 28 different places where somebody takes a profit" between the piglet and the consumer. Each place where value is added and the product is changed is a "profit center." For example, there is a profit center in breeding stock, a profit center in transportation, a profit center in financing, a profit center in packaging, and so on. "In every one of the profit centers," says Eisenbise, "the profit is so thin that what is gradually evolving in the agriculture industry is an integrated system so that the producer get the profit at each stage of the line from production to consumption."

There are two ways to integrate the system, according to Eisenbise. One way is from the top down, with big investments. He says that Cargill and Purdue are examples of big companies that are integrating the system from the top down. Purdue started as a breeder and has taken charge of other phases of processing and marketing, such as advertising. There is some indication that Purdue will be taking charge of its own financing, said Eisenbise, who noted he saw an ad which appeared in The Wall Street Journal seeking accountants and financial experts for Purdue.

How can a farmer compete with big industry? The farmer cannot integrate the system from the top like big investors. The way the farmer can take, is to put groups of producers together to raise capital. The PennMar Cooperative is such a group. It has taken shape with the support of the five marketing divisions of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association: PACMA; Commodity Futures Service (CFS); Pennsylvania Agricultural Producers International (PAPI); the Profits Division; and Milestone Brands Cooperative. These divisions offer service as facilitators and catalysts to farmers who want to organize together for control of processing and marketing their own products.

"This is the first step," says Eisenbise. "The future depends on the degree of success of this project." Serving on the board of directors of the PennMar Cooperative are Carolyn Rutter, Dover; Brian Keister, Mifflinburg; Craig Richard, Elysburg; Stanley E. Crone, Danville; Leon Wertz, Danville; Larry Yarger, Middleburg; Ronald Harrison; Park Thomas, Beavertown. Eisenbise is projecting that other groups of farmers will form other commodity cooperatives, for products such as beef, lamb and veal in Selinsgrove, and vegetables in Mifflin County. Farmers are already meeting to plan such projects.

Fred Kerr, Director of the Profits Division of Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, has been talking with farmers to find out their ideas. He met with a group of 20 central Pennsylvania agricultural producers Monday night to discuss the possibility of forming a group to study the opportunity to purchase the Clover Packing Plant in Selisgrove.

A steering committee will contact other producers to increase the group and to do a feasibility study on purchasing and operating that plant.

All these programs have got to be set up on available weeks," says Fred Kerr, director of the Profits Division of PFA. Royal Palmer, Marlin Miller and Kerr have been meeting with potential consumers to find out what the market is. They meet with institutions such as nursing homes, hospitals, and schools, who mak up 40 to 44% of the food market, to determine what the institutions are looking for. Kerr says, we "need to plan effectively the balance between production and marketing."

Alternative production options are being considered, says Kerr. He is looking at the production of sheep and young cattle for veal as production alternative to beef and hogs. "It appears that the market would be strong for lamb, particularly in metropolitan area. There is also potential for exporting lamb to foreign countries," he says.

D & L Meats offers the custom cuts customers want

BY SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Staff Correspondent

UNION BRIDGE, MD — It's the only place you can go to get a "Charlie King Roast." D & L Meats in Union Bridge, Md., is the only meat business around that sells the special order, "secret recipe" bottom round roast.

Alice Topper, of nearby Westminster, picked up two 13-pound Charlie King Roasts for Easter. "You've got to go to Union Bridge for that," she said. She planned to cook the boneless, no-waste cuts on a spit and serve them up with barbecue sauce to feed her 34 guests for Easter dinner.

The roast came to be known as the "Charlie King Roast" when King first ordered it, and others subsequently went to D & L asking for it by name. Orders for the roast are even recorded on sales slips as "Charlie King Roast."

Don Cunfer, master butcher, and his wife, Linda, established D & L Meats in the fall of 1978. "We really do try to accommodate people," said Mrs. Cunfer of their retail and custom order business.

Based in a white block building which was once a dairy, D & L Meats is located on George Street in Union Bridge, just several feet from the railroad bridge that crosses the cool, rolling waters of Little Pipe Creek. "We heard about this place," said Linda Cunfer of the location, when it was known as Union Bridge Locker Plant. She said they were "faced with having to rebuild the business. The Yinglings had built up a good reputation," she explained. Yingling's was in business until the early 1970's. "We still use the same cure and processing that they (Yingling's) used," she added.

Don Cunfer, with 40 years of experience, said he "never went to school" to learn butchering skills. "He's been in the meat business since he was 11," said his wife, "in one phase or another." The master butcher said he started in Drums, Pa., "in the old country slaughterhouse. I had a choice of farm or the slaughterhouse. Cunfer chose the latter. He said "that was when farm work was all done by hand, and that was not my cup of tea."

D & L Meats has steadily built up their clientele by offering only quality products, dealing with customers honestly and staying with old, time-tested recipes and processing techniques. Cunfer said the most important aspect of the business for his customers "is knowing that the animal that they brought in is the animal they get back. Your animal will not run with anyone else's."

He said he uses a name and number system, with every piece of meat hand tagged. Meat at D & L is "not switched or snitched," he said. "I have a conscience that I go to bed with every evening. I'm a Pennsylvania German Dutchman, and that's the way I was raised, and that's the way I'm going to die."

The operation is inspected by the USDA one to three times per week. The 12 or more rooms of the plant, from cattle pens outside, to the kill floor, to the retail area, are sanitized daily. Cunfer said, "There is a lot of time spent on cleaning and maintenance. It's costly." He said he uses 1,200 to 1,600 pounds of disinfectant cleaner every year.

A chilly tour of the plant revealed a labyrinth of specially equipped and temperature controlled rooms. The cure box is kept at a constant temperature of 40°F. In the busy season, from Nov. 1 to the end of January or mid-February, it contains as many as 10 to 15 stainless steel and fiberglass tanks that each hold one ton of meat — 70 to 90 hams per tank.

Perhaps best known for these hickory and apple smoked hams, Cunfer said they are first cured in a low-salt brine for two weeks. Then, they are transferred to the 3 80-year old smokehouses where they hang on racks over actual hickory and apple logs for three to four weeks.

D & L adds no water or preservatives to the hams, and uses real logs rather than liquid smoke, sawdust or wood chips. Linda Cunfer said that the slow process is unlike commercial enterprises that "cure today and smoke tomorrow."

The warmth and aroma of the smokehouses invite one peek inside. Like great vaults, the houses hold an average of one ton of hams and bacon. The meat hangs on a rotator and is heated with propane to bring it up to temperature, as required by the USDA.

"We still have to crawl down to the bottom and build a fire," added Cunfer. "It's a process of smoke and heat, smoke and heat." The aromatic hams and bacons are specially seasoned with a custom blend of spices. "It really is a secret recipe," said Cunfer. The couple even provides an instruction sheet which spells out "Care for Hickory and Apple Smoked Pork."

The butcher said cleaning the smokehouses takes a day and a half. "It's like cleaning giant ovens."

Sides of beef are hung in the chill box which is kept at between 32 and 33°F. With the keen eye of a butcher, Cunfer pointed out differences in the suspended beef and dairy carcasses. He explained, "If filled out properly, you can't tell the difference."

From the chill box, sides of beef are cut into quarters and then stored in the beef quarter box. Meat is then sliced to customers' specifications in the processing room. Four to five employees work year around, and an additional two or three part timers are employed in the busy winter season.

Depending upon the day and orders to be filled, Richard Frock may be manning the saw, while Danny Billington stuffs hams from the smokehouses into stockinets, and Pat Hahn may be carefully wrapping and stamping each cut of meat with the date, customer's number and name, in preparation for the freezer.

Like a quick visit to the Arctic Circle, Cunfer said the large walk-in freezer is kept at minus 20°F.," and with the fans blowing, that's a wind chill factor of minus 30°F.," he said.

The meat is "flash frozen" at that temperature. The freezer can accommodate more than 27 meat carts with each cart carrying seven to nine trays of meat. Sometimes the frost on the outside of the freezer gets so thick that Cunfer said he has to scrape it off.

The perimeter of the 20-by-40 ham drying room is lined with many three-tiered racks full of smoked hams, bacons and shoulders during the busy season. In the winter, that room is naturally refrigerated.

In an adjoining area, rows of meaty ham hocks hang from racks like miniature hams. The plump delicacies are a popular item with D & L customers. Smoked turkeys and chickens are also stored in that area.

"People aren't eating red meat like they used to," said Linda Cunfer, "so we are trying to offer more poultry and pork."

Customers come from all areas of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia to "bring us their meat to cure and smoke," said Cunfer. "They do travel a distance to get our smoked meats. People are looking for good smoked meats with no preservatives or water added, and they can't find them," he said.

On Good Friday one patron travelled from Leesburg, Va. to purchase six pounds of D & L's old-fashioned chipped beef. Cunfer said the process takes 10 to 13 weeks. He pointed to the meat standing in a great tub full of its own juices.

Other products offered in the retail area of the operation include D & L's own Football Ham, so dubbed because of its football shape. It is their lean, tasty version of a "deli ham." Scrapple, puddin', bacon, old fashioned sausage bladders, and much more, fill the meat cases in the store. Cunfer said that he sells an average of 300 hams, not including custom orders, during the Christmas season.

Master butcher Don Cunfer inspects carcasses in the chill box of D & L Meats.

The storefront serves as an office as well, where Linda Cunfer will go step by step through the order blanks to help customers deliberate thicknesses, weights, and quantities needed for custom orders of meat. The bulletin board holds news clips of their customers who make the headlines, like Mel Goble, who has his exotic Highlanders butchered there. Pig figurines dot the shelves and a pig pinata hangs over the deli case. Her collection of "pigmania" in the office extends to the kitchen of their New Windsor, Md. home, with pig cookie jars and suncatchers. She even officially stamps each purchase with "Hog Happy."

What does a master butcher eat at home? His wife said that one of his favorite meals is chuck roast in the crock pot, or barbecued spare ribs. For Easter, she served a ham and leg of lamb with a jacket.

The Cunfers emphasized that their main interests are in meeting the needs of their customers, cutting to their specifications and accommodating special orders (like the Charlie King Roast).

D & L Meats is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, until 6 p.m. Friday, and until 4 p.m. on Saturday. Linda Cunfer added, "We're one of the few businesses around that still takes a siesta." They close the door and turn out the lights from noon until 1 p.m. every day for lunch. "It's the only way we get to eat lunch," she said. Numbers to call are (301) 775-2611 and (301) 876-7745.

Don and Linda Cunfer, owners of D & L Meats, stand behind the meat display case in their Union Bridge market.

Extension Staffs Work on Financial Counseling Skills

Twenty-five extension professionals from Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey recently attended a two-day training session at the University of Delaware to learn how to use FINPAK, a series of computerized management programs designed to help economically hard-pressed farm families fight their way back to greater financial health.

FINPAK stands for Financial Planning and Analysis Package — a computer based system developed and distributed by the Center for Farm Financial Management at the University of Minnesota.

Delaware extension agricultural economists Dr. Don Tilmon and Carl German received FINPAK training in Minneapolis last June. Since then, they have been using the set of four computer programs to help individual Delaware farmers conduct in-depth analyses of their farm operations.

The recent training session was sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Services of Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey and organized by Tilmon in order to teach more extension professionals — especially county agricultural and home economics agents — how to use FINPAK in confidential financial counseling sessions with farm family clients. Nine professionals from New Jersey, 12 from Maryland and four from Delaware attended the session, which was held in a brand new computer laboratory on the University of Delaware campus. The training was provided by University of Minnesota extension economist Dr. Richard Hawkins, the developer of FINPAK.

According to Tilmon, a FINPAK analysis usually starts with an evaluation of a farmer's long-range economic plans and options. It then helps develop a three-year transition plan to move the farm from its current operation into the long-range plan. Finally, a procedure is developed to monitor monthly cash flow and control the year-to-year financial affairs of the farm.

Six Delaware extension professionals are now prepared to use the computerized series of farm management programs — Kent County home economist Roxane Whittaker, Sussex County agricultural agent Jay Windsor, New Castle County home economist Debbie Amsden, assistant extension farm management specialist Mark Kooker, extension marketing specialist Carl German and extension farm management specialist Dr. Don Tilmon. For further information on the FINPAK program, in Delaware contact Tilmon at 302-451-2511.

Farm leader calls for tax reform

HARRISBURG — A Pennsylvania farm leader today called on legislators to include agriculture in a proposal to reform local taxes.

D. Eugene Gayman, vice president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA), made the recommendation during testimony before the House Finance Committee considering H.B. 1415. The bill would permit public school district financing to come from a combination of flat rate income taxes and residential real estate taxes.

Gayman told the committee, "Since only residential realty tax would be eliminated under the optional tax plan, farmers would be asked to bear even greater tax burdens in districts adopting the plan." He added, "Given the present economic situation, farmers can ill afford to bear additional tax burdens on their operations."

PFA urged the legislators to amend the bill to include agricultural property. "At the very least," Gayman said, "the bill sould not limit the elimination of realty taxes under the optional tax plan to residential property, but should also include agricultural property." Gayman added, "We would more enthousiastically encourage this committee to report legislation which would give greater authority to local taxing bodies to determine the sources of taxation and the proportion of taxes to be raised from each source."

PFA is a voluntary, general farm organization representing over 23,000 farm families in 54 local associations.

A farmer spends $518 to produce the food for one person.

Apple Growers Appeal For Relief From Imports

WASHINGTON, D.C. – American apple growers have appealed to the International Trade Commission (ITC) for injury relief from a flood of foreign apple juice. Growers, processors and farm group spokespersons appeared before an International Trade Commission hearing Wednesday to list their grievances. The hearing was the government's response to a complaint filed by the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF). AFBF and 28 state Farm Bureaus contributed funds necessary for the trade complaint.

A large share of the imported product is made from concentrated red apple juice, subsidized by Eastern European countries, transhipped through Western Europe and exported to the U.S. The juice imports have weakened prices for all apples. Farm Bureau is seeking temporary relief in the form of quotas or tariffs.

To answer the formal complaint, the ITC must determine if the domestic apple juice industry is being hurt by imports.

Ken Nye, AFBF commodity specialist, testified that "Virtually every apple grower in the 35 apple producing states is being injured by concentrated apple juice imports. As consumer demand for apple juice began to increase rapidly in the 1970's, domestic growers expanded their production. The five-fold surge in imports in less than five years has resulted in reduced grower prices and actual abandonment of apples on which production expenses already had been incurred." Juice prices serve as a "floor" price for fresh and processing apples.

"Low demand for juice apples has created chaos in every segment of the industry," said Thomas Butler, marketing manager for an affiliate of the Michigan Farm Bureau Federation.

Ransomville, New York apple grower Paul Baker testified, "It costs us in excess of $6 a hundredweight to grow and harvest our apples. Last fall, we were offered $3/cwt. to not only grow and harvest these apples but also to pay for the freight."

American apple juice processors cannot offer growers better prices and still be competitive in the market place, said processor Peter Morrison. "Our price of 3.5 cents a pound to growers is the lowest in 10 years. It costs us $6.22 per gallon to produce concentrated apple juice. It is easy to see that we will not be able to compete very long against foreign apple juice concentrate being brought into this country at prices ranging from $4.75 to $5.15 per gallon."

"It is a tragedy of the greatest magnitude that juice markets developed by the domestic industries and supported by our advertising dollars are lost to cheap foreign concentrate, often of dubious quality, and in many cases stripped of its flavor because the essence has been removed," said Michigan grower Jerry Sietsema. "If we had a viable, stable market for our juice apples and received a fair price for them, it also would enhance the quality of both our fresh pack and sauce and slices because marginal fruit now forced into those other uses would be sold for juice. This would raise both the quality and price of fruit in these other two markets."

Paul Drazek, AFBF international trade specialist, said temporary relief in the form of tariffs or quotas for five years would provide incentive for the revitalization of idled U.S. processing capacity.

"The ITC will determine by May 17 if the concentrate imports are injuring the domestic industry," Drazek added.

pounds of fat as an 8-year old. Her granddam has a lifetime production of 130,140 pounds of milk.

Placing second in the bidding was Montana Madges Utile, an entry from Montana. She sold for $3,700 to David C. Jones, N.Y., and Laneway Farm, Va.

Consigned by Ayrshire Dairy Farm, Mont., this senior yearling is the result of the mating between Mar-Ral Madge's Boy and Montana M.L. Roberta. She also has the two great foundation bulls, Selwood Betty's Commander and Meredith Liberator, in her pedigree.

Sycamore Meade Man's Pamela and Hawksfield Ida 2 both sold for the price of $3,500.

"Pamela" was consigned by Earl E. Keefer, Sr. and Donald R. Shetterly, Millersburg, and purchased by David and Dora Hartford of Magic Meadows Farm, Vt.

This senior 2-year old is due to freshen in June to Sycamore Meade Carrie's Victor, a son of De Ayrs Royal Vitality. Her dam produced a record as a 10-year old of 18,179 pounds of milk with a 4.2 percent test.

She and "Ida" have the Selwood breeding influence on both sides of their pedigrees.

"Ida" was consigned by Nissa and Chris Dandanell of New Preston, Conn., and purchased by Sycamore Meade Farm, Millersburg.

This senior 2-year old is due in May to White Ayr Madges Bullet, a son of Mar-Ral Madge's Boy. She is the daughter of Granbyenne Royal Command. Her granddam produced two records over 20,000 pounds of milk.

The sale averaged $1,454.65 on 43 head. The crowd that came to bid stayed to the end, indicative of the quality animals throughout the sale.

This sale was sponsored by the Ayrshire Breeders Association, Brandon Vt. Earl Keefer served as sale chairman. Tom Whittaker read pedigrees and Milton Crosby served as auctioneer for the sale.

Chris Dandanell was the consignor of Hawksfield Ida 2 who sold for $3,500 to Sycamore Meade Farm represented by Earl Keefer (center). On the halter is Dale Maulfair.

Farm program cuts spending

LEBANON – in compliance with the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, the U.S. Department of Agriculture will reduce commodity program spending by 4.3 percent for fiscal year 1986. Commonly referred to as the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, the new law subjects 1986 Commodity Credit Corporation program payments to a reduction of $823 million, according to Edward Krebs, Chairperson.

"The reductions apply to checks paid to producers for 1986 commodity loans, deficiency payments, diversion payments, and payments for certificates that farmers redeem for cash," Mr. Krebs said. Both advance and final payments will be subject to the reduction.

"The reductions will be made after the maximum payment limitation of $50,000 per producer has been met."

Ed said target price and loan rates will not change for 1986. Payments made in kind or by negotiable commodity certificates will not be subject to the reduction. "No reductions will be made in price support loans, purchase agreements and regular deficiency payments made for 1985 crops." Mr. Krebs said the $11.60- per hundredweight dairy price support level will remain the same for the current fiscal year. However, CCC purchase prices for cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk will be reduced by 4.3 percent from March 1 through September 30. "Payments to milk producers under the Dairy Termination Program will not be reduced."

He said wool program payments will not be subject to reductions. However, the support prices for these commodities will not be increased. Payments due on or after April 1 will be based on the frozen support price for shorn wool.

According to Mr. Krebs, the amount of acreage entering into the Conservation Reserve Program and annual rental payments will not be reduced.

"Spending reductions are scheduled to begin March 1," the ASCS official said, "and farmers who sign up for the 1986 programs will be given further notification at that time as to how the programs will be affected by deficit reduction legislation."

25 Years As County Agent

The many facets of agriculture are especially visible in Lancaster County, home of Pennsylvania's strongest and most diversified ag economy. The job of a county extension agent in Lancaster is demanding and everchanging, requiring the skills of an adaptable, dedicated person. Someone like Arnold Lueck.

Lueck, who joined Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service in 1961, is marking his 25th anniversary as an extension agent. His work delivering information and coordinating programs on agronomy and horticulture has brought him together with farmers growing corn, alfalfa, potatoes, tobacco, celery, grapes and apples, as well as numerous other crops. Lueck's programs also have been designed for home gardeners, 4-H clubs, and agribusiness representatives.

He has been influential throughout the years in helping farmers adapt their growing practices to include integrated pest management, a program that has led to increased efficiency and reduced the environmental impact of pesticides. "This was just one part of my main concern," explains Lueck, "which was to keep the farmers up to date on the results of changing ag technology and to see them adapt and use practices that help in their production and marketing."

Lueck says he still pays "house calls" to his clients, the farmers and home gardeners of Lancaster County. He also has worked with area business people to organize seminars and community meetings, where he supplies information on recent research results and practical suggestions on how to apply them to the daily operation of farms and agricultural businesses.

Over the years Lueck has created a special niche for his extension programs with area newspapers and television stations. He has received two awards from the Pennsylvania Association of County Agricultural Agents for writing two columns that appear weekly in local newspapers. He also received WGAL-TV's Green Thumb Award for a series of gardening programs that aired several years ago.

Recently Lueck was presented with a hand-made plaque honoring his service to a county 4-H club. Although he isn't officially a 4-H coordinator, he says he finds great rewards from working with the kids involved in 4-H. "The thing that gives me the most satisfaction is watching youth as well as adults make changes that improve their lives," he says. "It's most rewarding to watch them achieve something and know that it is the result of Extension."

In recent years Lueck has directed more of his energy working with farmers on their marketing skills and programs. "The farmer has to look far beyond the farm gate to market his product today," he says. "Now he have a world market that is much more competitive. And I intend to continue working more and more in this area."

Before coming to Penn State, Lueck grew up on a Wisconsin dairy farm and earned a Bachelor of Science degree in agriculture from the University of Wisconsin. He came to Pennsylvania in 1942 as an assistant in the Regional Pasture Research Laboratory located in University Park. After completing some graduate studies in agriculture at the university, he taught vocational agriculture in public schools for several years. In 1961, Lueck joined the extension staff and has been working in Lancaster County since.

Active in many community service groups, Lueck is a member of the Pennsylvania and National Associations of County Agricultural Agents, three honorary fraternities, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, the State Horticultural Society, and the Master Corn Growers Association.

Lebanon County Beef Benefit Raises $11,766

LEBANON – Lebanon County's Farm Show champion beef "Colonel" did more than put Lebanon's 4-H program in the limelight at the Farm Show. He became an excellent fund raiser for the Lebanon Valley Exposition Corporation.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos R. Leffler, owner of Leffler, Inc., purchased the popular Colonel at the Farm Show Youth Livestock Sale. Lefflers' then donated the steer to the Lebanon Valley Expo Corporation to serve as the basis for a fund raiser to benefit the Expo Corporation grounds, otherwise known as the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds. Lefflers' goal was to help out Lebanon County's youth programs through improving their fairgrounds. That it will do because $11,766 was raised from the "Beef Benefit" Raffle.

"This fundraiser was a huge success because we had a great bunch of kids and local businesses working on it," states Harry Bachman, Lebanon Valley Exposition Corporation chairman. "Furthermore, we're deeply indebted to Mr. Leffler and Leffler, Inc., for their generous donation and support of Lebanon County Youth.

Nearly 300 4-H and FFA members and local business persons helped to sell raffle tickets. The top ten sales persons who received cash awards for their efforts were: Amy Bachman, Matt Bushong, Daryl Grumbine, Brian Kreider, Gretchen Fasnacht, Melanie Bow, Jenny Lentz, Shelby Heagy, Leigh Hitz, and Charity Farrell.

Numberous 4-H clubs and FFA chapters contributed by selling raffle tickets or collecting donations. The Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Club led the way selling 3,850 tickets. Cedar Crest FFA was second, followed by Campbelltown 4-H, third; the 4-H Tractor Club, fourth; and No-So-Ann 4-H Dairy Club, fifth.

Ethel Sheldon, Quentin was the winner of the first prize, a hindquarter of Choice Beef.

To show their support for those selling tickets or collecting donations, the Expo Corporation is planning a "Youth Fun Day" at a local park. Details are not yet finalized, but there will be swimming, volleyball, basketball, baseball, and just an all around good time for the day.

Above Average Performance Is Average

Compare the production and feed efficiency of the Hisex White and Hisex Brown layers and you won't find any better, anywhere. And that is a condition that will continue since Hisex research and development keeps improving the breed.

But mere test figures don't tell the whole story. The fact is that good henhouse managers can beat these figures. Hisex field testing has proven that. You may well obtain better feed conversion, mortality, and higher production.

As in all things, you must start with a good, basic product. The good genes, in other words.

See for yourself. Put these great birds to work for you soon. You'll find their average performance produces above average results.

Adams Co. Family Share Feelings About Stock Tax Exemption For Farmers

Editors Note: The interpretation of the state farm capital stock tax laws often seem to cause a problem. Lancaster Farming's Adams County staff correspondent, Ginger Secrist Myers, talked this week with a farm family who has this problem. While the farm family set up corporations to provide an orderly transfer of the farming business on to the next generation, IRS has not yet agreed on the stock tax exempt status of the corporation. Here's the story of their experience.

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Staff Correspondent

YORK SPRINGS — "We're a family farm. The question of the operations of the Peters Orchard Company and John B. Peters, Inc. is simply a matter of how we chose to run our business . . . Our corporations were set up to be a generation transfer mechanism, not to evade any taxes. It centralizes our operation and keeps the operation in one hand." So states George M. Peters, one of the owners and operators of Peters' Orchards, Adams County.

The Peters family and their attorneys are scheduled to appear before the PA Supreme Court on a suit concerning the Peters' filing for an exemption from the Capital Stock Tax as it applies to family farm corporations. The Peters family has been on this arduous path with the PA Department of Revenue since 1981 when they filed for the exemption under House Bill 567.

PA House Bill 567 allows for the exemption of family farm corporations from paying Capital Stock Tax if the corporation has at least seventy-five percent of its assets devoted to the business of agriculture and if at least seventy-five percent of its stock is owned by members of the same family. The term "Business of Agriculture" specifically excludes (1) recreational activities such as hunting, fishing, camping, skiing, show competition or racing, (2) raising, breeding, or training game animals, birds, fish, cats, dogs, pets, or animals intended for use in sporting or recreational activities, (3) fur farming, (4) stockyard and slaughter house operations or, (5) manufacturing or processing of any kind.

The Peters family certainly qualifies under the ownership clause. All restricted stock in their corporations are owned by family members. The Peters Orchard Company owns 2500 acres of orchard land and equipment. John B. Peters, Inc. has an operating budget of roughly $3 million annually in the production and sales of a variety of fruit from that land.

Patriarch John B. Peters and his wife Mary E. K. founded the Peters Orchard Company in 1960. At that time, they were only working with their son John F. Peters. Due to failing health, John B. no longer wanted to be actively involved in the day to day operations of the orchard; but, wanted an orderly way to move his son John F. and three other sons and two daughters into the operation. At that time, all the family's real estate was incorporated under the name Peters Orchard Company. By 1966, after both parents and all their children had become involved in the first corporation, the family saw a need to facilitate the entrance of a third generation into the business. The John B. Peters corporation was formed for this purpose. This corporation operates the farm, leasing the assets from the first. George Peters notes that this arrangement allows another family member to come into the business and see if they like the work without a capital outlay for real estate and equipment. It also allows for the continued involvement of the older Peters' with their real estate assets. Both corporations are actively involved in the operations of the orchards.

Stated Peters, "This is all done with individual investor money. It's been advantageous in these difficult fiscal times to have been able to retain money within our family. If we had had to go to the bank and borrow money in these existing economic times, we'd be just like everybody else with a lot of credit out. Just to say that families can't own jointly just because its not widely done isn't to say that everyone involved in this business doesn't have an active interest or that it shouldn't be done."

From the time of incorporation and until the tax reform code of 1981 was passed that exempted family farm corporations from paying Capital Stock Tax, the Peters' paid their corporate taxes. In 1981, when they filed for an exemption it was denied by the PA Department of Revenue. The Peters filed an appeal and lost. They then filed an appeal with the Commonwealth Court and were again denied the exemption.

In this action, the court perceived that the Peters Orchard Company was only a leasing company and was involved only passively with the operation and the John B. Peters, Inc. was an active corporation involved in the "business of agriculture". The Court agreed with the Peters' view that the legislative intent behind the exemption is to preserve farmland by alleviating one of the tax burdens that often force farm families to sell their farmland, but it did not agree with the Peters' claim that their exemption would be consistent with that intent. The Court ruled that a corporation that leases its assets to another entity which is actually doing the production is not entitled to the exemption.

In the context of this ruling, George Peters summarizes that the law cannot dictate the preservation of the family farm. He feels that it is a combination of the interpretation of the law and the strength of the economy that will dictate how the farmer will survive. He feels the attorneys view their case from the position of tax impact; the Peters' view their case as to how they will be able to bring their next generation into farming.

The next stop on the agenda for this case is the PA State Supreme Court. Briefs have been filed by both parties and they are awaiting a hearing date. PFA has filed an Amicus Curiae (friend of the court) brief in this case. PFA was instrumental in the passage of the statue and feels it has information that would be beneficial to the court on its decision of intent.

George Peters concluded, "We're willing to take a stand on this. We have the guts to fight it. It's clear to us that the court so clearly mis-interpreted both the intent of the law and our application of it. We feel it's worth the struggle. We're fighting for the preservation of exactly what people call the 'family farm'."

Farmers hit by Heptachlor eligible for indemnities

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Dairy farmers facing losses from heptachlor-contaminated feed may soon be eligible for indemnity payments, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng announced today.

The administration has requested an emergency supplemental appropriation that would provide direct financial assistance to help dairy farmers through this disaster, he said.

The funds would be distinguished through USDA's dairy indemnity program, which USDA intends to extend to these farmers. Interim final rules for this action will be published next week in the Federal Register.

In mid-March Lyng dispatched an emergency dairy contamination task force to conduct an on-the-spot assessment of the pesticide contamination in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri.

"Based on the taske force's findings on production losses and number of cows under quarantine, an estimated $6 million will be needed to cover dairy farmers' claims," he said.

The administration has requested a $6 million package to fund the dairy indemnity program. "We urge the Congress to act quickly on this request," said Lyng.

More than 50 dairy herds remain under quarantine. Milk from the cows cannot be sold, and financial losses to farmers are threatening their operations, he said. Dairy products have been recalled in Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas.

"The limit for heptachlor in milk is 0.1 parts per million, but some farms have over 10 parts per million in their milk," Lyng said. "It may take anywhere from a few months to as long a two years before a dairy herd is 'clean' and free of heptachlor contamination."

According to Lyng, farmers with contaminated herds should file claims now with their county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office. This early filing process with expedite payments to producers upon congressional passage of the full funding request, he said.

On March 21, USDA authorized credit assistance to the stricken dairy farms. The Farmers Home Administration loans were announced as an iterim measure until the administration could complete its review of the direct economic losses in the three-state area and determine how the estimated losses could be accommodated in the federal budget.

...when the label recommends "spreader-sticker"

SF-1 1185

Sometimes you just have to spray, even under the worst of conditions. That's one reason you need Surfix® spreader/sticker. Surfix keeps your pesticide on the leaf, through wind and sun and rain. It forms a bond between droplet and leaf surface that resists washoff.

Surfix can improve your spray application under most conditions. It reduces the evaporation of spray droplets, sticks droplets onto the leaf surface and spreads those droplets for more uniform coverage.

Surfix contains more active ingredients than most other spreader/stickers . . . one-third more than most competitors. This means it takes less Surfix to do the job.

Of course, no single spray additive is right for every job. So Helena carries a full line of additives. Your Helena man will work with you to select the one that fits your pesticide needs.

But when you're stuck with bad weather, stick with Surfix.

This Mare Has Two Healthy Babies

To place odds that a mare will give birth to twin foils seems rather hard to do, at least in layman circles. Some say maybe one in a 100,000. Others say up to 1 million to one, especially if both of the offspring are healthy. The public library couldn't come up with an official odds either.

But never- the less, this mustang named Blacky on the breeding farm of James and Norma Wible, Chestnut Hill Road, Fredericksburg, did it on April 17–a black colt and a chestnut filly. Because the mustang is such a hardy breed that may have contributed to the health of the babies.

The mother doesn't really appreciate strange men taking her babies' pictures, but children and women are welcome anytime. With the use of a telephoto lense, Lancaster Farming's managering editor, Everett Newswanger, caught up with this galloping trio of mother and babies Monday afternoon. Oh yes, big daddy, a registered appaloosa officially named Osage Chief Little Guy stands at stud in Wible's stable and is pictured elsewhere in this issue.

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

"Salute to Ayrshires"

Every breed association holds a meeting annually for it's members. It is always an exciting and memorable event, and serves to hold together an exclusive group of people dedicated to a singular purpose. Everyone benefits from their enthusiasm.

The recent convention of Ayrshire Breeders at Grantville, Pa., was one of those rare opportunities to witness that dedication and enthusiasm. Like most of the "colored breeds," Ayrshires do not dominate the field in numbers, but certainly do have the potential to hold their own when it comes to beauty (type) as well as productivity. And Ayrshire breeders are well aware of it.

On a dismal, damp and snowy April day, eight busloads of them were given the opportunity to see Pennsylvania history and agriculture. And both are intertwined with the present and the future of dairying, as well as the breed itself. For the farms they visited were located in the heart of history, between Harrisburg and Philadelphia. And the operations all typified what makes America great and will guarantee the success of the Ayrshire breed.

The small family operations like the Charles Gable's Conebella Farm, and Earl Keefer's Sycamore Meade, are perfect examples of what can be accomplished by farm families that have a vision and a dream. And the dream is enhanced and enlivened by other, more broadly inspired institutions like Masonic Homes in Elizabethtown and Ardrossan Farms in Villanova. Unlike the family operations, the latter have their own reasons for being besides producing a family living. Love and money both play an important role.

All of the Ayrshire farms mentioned, as well as others that could be seen in the central Pennsylvania region, are making a major contribution to the dairy industry. That contribution is the preservation and improvement of a breed that is minor in numbers but major in quality and service to mankind. In spite of their minority they constitute a basic foundation of strength in the dairy business.

The great potential of Ayrshires to produce high quality as well as profitable quantity is exemplified in the Ardrossan herd. It has emerged as one of the truly outstanding herds of the Ayrshire breed and of all breeds. And every one of the over 200 cows in the herd are descendants of nine cows imported from Scotland in 1910! The current Rolling Herd Average is 19,699 pounds of milk per cow, with over 825 pounds of fat. Holsteins beware!

Holsteins naturally dominate the dairy industry in the U.S. Economically, it is only natural that they should. But there is a niche, a very important niche, for all of the colored breeds. Not that they all need to compete with Holsteins for size and production.

There was and still is, a very good reason for the development of the Ayrshires in Scotland, the Jerseys and Guernseys in the Channels, and the Swiss in the mountains of Central Europe. Simmentals and other dual breeds were bred and devleoped for special reasons. And each breed has its devotees that love and pamper their favorites. Each must find its own economic niche as well.

Color alone is not the issue, although it breaks the monotony of black on white or white on black.

I sincerely hope that the world is never reduced to a monochrome of color, or a standard of size and shape. That hope applies to cows as well as people, and other creatures also. And I might even include my computer screen! A little color sure would help relieve the montony there too. As it now stands, I must supply the color with words, and that isn't easy.

Let's hope that the colored breeds of cattle are never reduced to a few words in the history books. They deserve to be nurtured and improved, for their own benefit and the welfare of all people.

Larry, with his wife Gale and three children, currently resides at Berlin, PA. After several weeks of training at various locations in the state, he will assume permanent base in Region 5, Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Get The Only New Technology Available For Cage Systems

Chore-Time's new 20" deep SSS 4-high system puts 33% more birds into the same row lengths as old style 3-high systems - without dropping boards and without a need for greater building width. That means at 6 birds per 16"x20" cage (53.3 square inches) a 52'x536' building can house over 108,000 birds.

But, just as important, with this Chore-Time system you also don't have to sacrifice the features and benefits you've come to expect from Chore-Time: single file egg belt, our all galvanized, SOFT TOUCH® II egg collection, a gentle cage floor slope to prevent checks and cracks...rugged A-frame cage support and legs every 4 feet to protect against cage sag and trough wear and Galv-A-Weld (welded black then galvanized) cage construction for long, trouble-free life... a choice of feeding systems to help you take control of feed costs: Meal Master Feedkar (traveling feed hopper), M.T. (rotating Flex Auger), and NEW Ultraflex (80 ft. per minute circulating Flex Auger).

And, with Chore-Time feeding systems you can take full advantage of the new production-boosting, feed-saving MEAL-TIME® feeding method developed by Chore-Time. Our feeding systems are designed to minimize waste and provide each bird with fresh, Un-Picked-Over feed.

Extension Service In Towanda Offers Tractor Certification

Farmers who expect to hire anyone under 16 years of age to work on a farm should be aware of the Child Labor requirements in Agriculture under the Fair Labor Standards Act. Under Child Labor provisions of the Act, it is unlawful for an employer to hire anyone under 16 years of age to operator a tractor of over 20 P.T.O. horsepower, or connecting or disconnecting an implement or any of its parts to or from such a tractor. Also, illegal according to the regulation would be the operation or assisting to operate most tractor powered or self-powered equipment. Some livestock, lumbering, storage and pesticide work is classified hazardous and illegal. Youth employed by parent or guardian are exempt.

Some may question the legal importance of the training, and to date I have not heard of any court cases in Pennsylvania. However, if a serious accident involving an uncertified youth occurs, the resulting investigations could be very uncomfortable for the employer. Fines to an employer may be $1,000 first offenses, and $10,000 or up to six months imprisonment or both for a second offense. Youth of 14 and 15 years of age may be legally hired if they become certified through a tractor certification program. The certification indicates that the bearer has completed safety instructions and is not an operators license.

A certification program will be available starting at 7:00 p.m., May 12 at the Extension Office at 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda. If a youth 14 or 15 years of age plans to work on a farm this summer or if a farmer plans to hire a person of this age, they may become certified by completing this cours[illegible] There will be fee[illegible] evening sessions starting at 7:00 p.m. on May 12, 14, 19 and 21 and a morning session starting at 9:00 a.m., Saturday, May 31 during which a driving test will be given. Youth 13 years of age will be accepted but will not receive their certification until their fourteenth birthday.

Contact the Extension Office for more details if needed (265-2896). Registration is necessary and should be made by April 30 either by telephone or writing Tom Maloney, P.O. Box 69, Extension Service, Towanda, PA 18848.

There will be a charge of $3.00 to cover the cost of study materials.

Extension announces farmland tax assessment meetings

YORK – York County Extension Service, in cooperation with the county commissioners, is planning a series of meetings on the upcoming property tax reassessments.

Focus of the meetings is to bring farmland owners up to date on the impending visit of assessors and the preferential assessments available for qualified farmland in agriculture use through Act 319. Act 319 is also known as the Clean and Green Law.

"We hope to dispel rumors about the reassessment and Act 319," says extension agent Tony Dobrosky. "We will explain how the appraisers are going to use this information to arrive at a value on land and buildings. By doing so, it is hoped this will minimize inconvenience to farmers, and help them understand the process."

Dr. Robert Barr and Mr. David Barr, representing 21st Century Appraisals, Inc., will present the series of meetings. All meetings begin at 7:30 p.m., and are scheduled as follows:

May 5 - Southeastern High School Auditorium, Hanover;

May 13 - Nothern Middle School Auditorium, Dillsburg;

May 20 - Spring Grove Jr. High Auditorium, Spring Grove;

May 21 - Northeastern Sr. High Auditorium, Manchester.

Landowners with additional questions concerning the upcoming meetings may contact the York County Extension service at 757-9657.

Corn byproduct looks good

Beef and dairy cattle are happy with the byproduct left over after corn syrup is squeezed from corn to make sugar for Coke, Pepsi and other colas.

This corn gluten, as it is called, is high in fiber and runs about 20 percent protein.

From a cow's point of view, it looks for all the world like high-quality alfalfa.

"In our experiments, corn gluten was just as good as corn grain at keeping cows in a positive protein balance — giving them more energy than they were using," Connie Cordes said in a report to the American Society of Animal Science.

And there was a bonus.

"The wet or dry corn gluten didn't decrease pH in the cow's rumen like corn grain does." said Cordes, University of Missouri-Columbia animal scientist.

Decreasing pH means the rumen becomes too acid, slowing digestion of hay.

Feeding corn gluten means cattle eat and digest more hay, so they gain better.

In her research trials, Cordes divided lightweight (500 pounds) replacement heifers into three groups. One group got a corn and urea supplement; another, dry corn gluten; and the other a 50-50 mix of corn gluten and corn-urea supplement.

The groups fed the corn gluten alone or in combination with corn-urea gained 1.1 pound a day compared to only .8 pound per day for those that received the corn-urea supplement.

"It appears that these calves fed corn gluten increased their hay fiber utilization because pH wasn't decreased in the rumen," Cordes said.

With all the advantages of corn gluten, you might expect dairy and beef producers to be in a hurry to buy the stuff. But UMC animal scientist John Paterson had a word of caution.

"If you use a byproduct like corn gluten, buy it on the basis of its energy value compared to corn grain and its protein value compared to soybean meal.

"Right now, the pricing is too close, because 80-90 percent of our corn gluten is shipped overseas.

"I'd advise producers to watch the markets and to buy corn gluten when prices turn in their favor," Patterson said.

Young bulls will provide about 5% more meat than steers do for the same price. Research showed that young bulls gain weight faster and more efficiently than steers. The meat has the same cooking quality as meat from steers, but less fat. The main drawback to consumer acceptance is that steer meat has more marbling than bull meat, which researchers say is not the most important part of meat quality anyway. Scientists are looking for ways, including genetic improvement, to produce leaner meat at less cost with the flavor, juices, and other qualities necessary for consumer acceptance.

Conservation Tillage Increases On Farmland

Another two percent of the Nation's farmland was farmed under some form of conservation tillage in 1985, according to a report from the Conservation Tillage Information Center at Fort Wayne, Indiana (CTIC). Last year, 31.4 percent of the cropland, or 99.6 million acres, was planted under some form of this soil protecting practice.

Delaware led the nation with 77.3 percent, followed by Maryland with 68.9 percent. Pennsylvania's percentage was 42.8. The greatest acreages were in Iowa, over 12 million acres, and in Kansas, with over 11 million acres.

John Spitzer, Agronomist with the USDA Soil Conservation Service in Pennsylvania, defined conservation tillage as any planting or tillage system in which 30 percent or more of the soil remains covered with plant residue after planting. Spitzer said that the 30 percent residue cover is the amount needed to reduce erosion by one-half that of conventional tillage with no cover after planting.

Spitzer noted that there are five types of conservation tillage included in the report. They are no-till, ridge-till, strip-till, mulch-till, and reduced-till. "The greatest erosion control is gained with no-till," noted Spitzer. In no-till, the soil is not disturbed before planting. Seeds are planted in a slit in the soil. Weed control is obtained mostly with herbicides.

No-till farming is popular in the Northwest. According to the CTIC report, Delaware again leads with 41.5 percent of the cropland planted by the no-till method. They are followed by West Virginia with 32 percent, Maryland - 30 percent, Virginia - 29 percent, Pennsylvania - 19 percent, New Jersey - 15 percent, and Ohio - 13 percent.

The corn belt of the Midwest has the most acreage, but it amounts to less than 10 percent of the cropland.

Farmers interested in additional information in any of the conservation tillage methods should contact their county office of the USDA Soil Conservation Service or the Agricultural Extension Service.

Heifer Project Exporting Animals from Buyout

LITTLE ROCK – Hundreds of superior dairy cattle will be saved from slaughter by sending them to needy farmers in Third World countries, thanks to the efforts of one U.S. based agriculture development agency. Officials of Heifer Project International (HPI), which sends livestock to needy families around the world, recently announced a plan which could enable American dairy farmers to donate and export cattle which would otherwise be slaughtered under the federally sponsored Dairy Termination Program.

The plan is to place 1000 heifers in developing countries overseas, provided that funds can be raised for transportation, and related costs, including training or recipients, according to Alden R. Hickman, executive director of HPI.

Shipping and related costs have been estimated at $750-$1500 per head, which must be obtained separately from the organization's current operating budget, Hickman said. He added that HPI will place as many heifers as possible with funds donated for this purpose.

"We invite all people who want to see these fine animals put into milk production overseas rather than slaughtered to help with a donation towards the shipping and handling costs." Hickman said.

Under this plan, dairy farmers can donate young heifers to HPI and have them sent to countries where more milk is needed. This would serve the dual purpose of preserving valuable genetic lines that some farmers have spent years building, while allowing poor farmers in other countries to production milk for their children and communities.

HPI's plan was established in response to numerous inquiries from dairy farmers who are participating in the national "buy-out" but do not want to see their animals slaughtered, Hickman said.

"We see this as an opportunity to put these animals to good use," Hickman said. "We are presently considering projects for Mexico, Egypt, Bolivia and Jordan and are checking with other countries to assess the need." The most immediate need, he added, is for approximately 40 bred Holstein heifers (in their first three months of pregnancy) to complete a shipment slated to go to Jordan in May.

Hickman stressed that only high quality, young heifers would be accepted. Guidelines for acceptance of donated animals are as follows:

- All animals must be donated. HPI will not buy the heifers.
- Holstein, Jersey and Brown Swiss heifers are eligible.
- Registered animals are preferred and are required for some countries.
- Animals must meet federal health requirements.
- Donated Holstein heifers must be from dams which have produced 16,000 pounds of milk or more per year; Jersey or Brown Swiss heifers must be from dams which have produced 11,000 pounds of milk or more per year.
- Animals must be from six months of age to three months pregnat at the time of shipment. Shipments will be at various times throughout 1986 and 1987.

HPI will collect donated animals at their centers throughout the country. Donors will be notified as to which center their heifers should be delivered.

Heifer Project International has provided livestock to needy families around the world for over 40 years. The aim of the non-profit development agency is to promote self-sufficiency through animal agriculture. Recipients also receive vocational training and veterinary consultation on caring for and breeding the animals.

Farmers wising to donate heifers or people wishing to donate funds for transport should contact the HPI office in their region or Camille Cress at the Heifer Project International headquarters, P.O. Box 808, Little Rock, Arkansas, 501-376-6836.

60 COWS 18,714 LBS. MILK; 688 LBS. B.F.

"After using my Harvestore Systems for over ten years, one thing I can say is that they work! I really like the quality feed that comes out of them. As far as I'm concerned they are everything the dealer says they are."

"We try to cut our haylage at the bud stage. We cut when the hay is ready, regardless of what the weather calls for. We feed no hay to the cows - not since 1975."

"The convenience is worth it. My son and I can be out in the field and my wife is able to feed the cows. I must give her a lot of credit in this operation. If it weren't for her, I wouldn't be where I am today!"

"If you use Harvestore Systems the way the dealership says, they really work! They are an investment — the way to go! The first year we noticed better herd health and increased production and butterfat. Feed goes further, too. I'd guess maybe a third more."

"I've had more expense on my conventional silo maintenance than I've had on both Harvestore Structures. There's no doubt about it. I've averaged about $130/year on maintenance costs for my Harvestore haylage structure. If Glen and I would do our own service work we probably would have spent less for maintenance."

"What I really like about Harvestore Systems is that they stand behind what they sell!"

Lilypons Water Gardens is one of world's largest water lily suppliers

BY SHARON SCHUSTER
Staff Correspondent

LILYPONS, MD — The story unfolds like a fairytale, with all the majesty and mystery of a night-blooming tropic water lily. It was in 1936 that Miss Lily Pons of the Metropolitan Opera Company visited the water gardens of Three Springs Fisheries near Buckeystown, Md., founded by entrepreneur George Leciester Thomas in 1917.

The legendary Miss Pons flitted onto the scene like a butterfly to light momentarily upon the lily-filled waters. A crowd of about 3,000 rimmed the perimeter of one of Three Springs' 500 ponds to watch the opera star dangle her fingers over the side of a rowboat, teasing the exotic Koi that swam under the lily pads.

Said to be a publicity stunt to bring attention to the soprano's career, the water gardens, from that day, became known as Lilypons Water Gardens. "The pun was irresistible," said Virginia Thomas, great-granddaughter of the founder of "the largest supplier of water lilies in the free world."

Relating the story as her grandmother told it to her, Thomas said the start of Lilypons was "legendary." She said her great-grandfather had developed a thriving goldfish business with water lilies as an aside. The business grew to such an extent that in 1935, Lilypons opened its own post office and officially became a town.

Lilypons lies like an exotic island paradise on the banks of the Monocacy River and is surrounded by the fertile fields of dairy farms of nearby Buckeystown. The area has a fair amount of lime deposit, with a lime kiln just a mile away from the water gardens. Thomas explained that the lime rich soil is "extremely good for goldfish, especially for their color."

"Lilies always were the aside," said Thomas of her family's business, "until about 1978." At that time her father, Charles Thomas, whom she identified as "the most progressive aquatic nurseryman alive today," increased the emphasis on water lily propagation. "He was very interested in it, and he has turned the business into what it is today," she added.

And what it is today, is 300 acres of ponds, canals and bogs (originally excavated by hand and with horses), that produce enough varieties of aquatic plants to fill a 75-page catalog. Lilypons fills the orders of loyal visitors to "the fish house," and mail order customers from as far as Japan, Africa, France, Germany, India, Mexico and Canada.

Water lilies come in a full spectrum of colors, ranging from white to pink, and from yellow to blue, and with foliage that is termed 'mottled,' 'speckled', or with a 'bronze cast.' And, water lilies come in day-blooming varieties (not to be confused with the day lily that thrives along dusty country lanes), and night-blooming varieties.

Day bloomers "awaken each morning and go sleep in late afternoon," according to the glossy, color-illustrated catalog designed by Mrs. Charles Thomas, "Hardy lilies," such as the exquisite white "Virginia," named for Charles Thomas' mother, the golden "Sunrise," and the radiant red "Flammea," are available from April through September.

The tropical day-bloomers, such as the "Yellow Dazzler," and the blue "Charles Thomas," named in honor of the current owner of Lilypons, are available from June through September. And, the lotus is another aquatic plant that thrusts its stems 2 to 5 feet out of the water. It's blossoms permeate a "heady fragrance" that is "intoxicating." A Lotus Festival is held in early September each year.

But, it's the luminesence of the night blooming tropical lilies that attracts the eye of the catalog shopper. The night bloomers start to open their colorful petals at dusk, and emit their special radiance under the moonlight, well into the following morning.

"A lot of people like to get one of each," said Thomas, "so they have something blooming all the time." Thomas said the fragrance of the tropicals is "an amazing scent. If the breeze is blowing your way, it's a beautiful fragrance."

The most popular lily is the "Hardy pink". Thomas suggested that its popularity may be linked with the famous Monet painting which is spattered with their likeness. Lilies also come in a variety of sizes from the 2 to 3 feet spanse of the "pygmy," to the sprawling "Victoria," whose pads alone may measure 4 feet around. Prices of lilies start at $17.95, with the most expensive lily in the catalog priced at $95. The medium price for lilies at Lilypons is about $25.

Thomas said water liliies are "very tough." Some varieties may even take over an earth bottom pond. She recommended the more hybrid varieties.

Planting a water lily that has been freshly harvested by a wader at Lilypons is a fairly simple task; perhaps one that is best suited for a hot, sticky summer day. In an earth bottom pond, such as the typical farm pond, Thomas said, "Go in barefoot or in hip waders; push the plant into the ground. The mud will almost suck the plant in," she explained. "Make sure the crown of the plant is not under the mud." She recommended six to ten square feet of pond surface for each plant, with at least 30 percent of the pond remaining free and open.

For those who have something smaller than a farm pond in mind, Lilypons simplifies the chore of excavating and designing. The catalog outlines step by step illustrated directions for installing a pool liner or one of 12 preformed, fiberglass pools, from the 70 gallon Tear drop, to the 420-gallon Lagoon.

Waterscaping can still be achieved without the excavation of a pond. No need to fear that swampy area just back of the spring house anymore. Why not plant a bog garden? Poorly-drained soils that stay wet all year are described as "ideal" for planting cattails, water poppies, the flowering arrowhead, spider lilies, lizard's tail and iris- "royalaty of the bog."

Cultivating water lilies is a favorite hobby with many, including one of Lilypons' regular customers, Vice President George Bush. Lilypons is the place to become initiated into the fascinating world of water gardening.

Whatever the choice for waterscaping, Lilypons offers many items to add a special touch to a water garden. Thomas said that most people with lily ponds have a spray or waterfall which adds not only an element of beauty, but also serves to aerate the water. Aeration is particularly important when the pond is stocked with goldfish or Koi.

The ornamental fish, in all sizes and colors, are available at Lilypons. Starting at $3 for a pair of 2- to 3-inch "Comets," to $195 for a pair of the imperial shimmery gold 10- to 12-inch Koi, Lilypons offers one free with each pair the customer purchases.

Koi are very popular. "The definition of their color is what makes them so valuable," said Thomas. She explained that Koi are intelligent fish that can be trained to respond to a whistle, and eat out of the hand. "People become fanatical about them" she said. "Some of the fish are fine enough that we price them individually." During the Koi Festival in early September, Thomas said they will have the big "two footers," on display.

As an added dimension to the water garden, Lilypons suggests that fountains, sculpture, waterfalls and statuary create "melodic sounds and fascinating patterns made by spilling water." Statuary displays range from 4-inch frogs to almost lifesize nymph-like children who are poised to frolick in the spray of a fountain.

On a hot August day, the trickle of water "makes it seem just a little cooler," Charles Thomas said.

Finally, there is a variety of scavengers from which to choose. Described as the "sanitation department" for the pool, snails, tadpoles, clams and mussels are sold in pairs, dozens or by the hundred. Lilypons suggests stocking one scavenger per square foot of pond area.

Lilypons Water Gardens

On June 21 the 50th anniversary of Miss Lily Pons' visit will be celebrated with a re-creation of the event. Carolene Winter, a soprano with the Baltimore Opera, will be "going through the motions of being Lily Pons," said Thomas. Visitors are invited to bring a picnic lunch and enjoy the festivities which will last into the evening.

One of the highlights of the evening will be the showing of a vintage film, entitled "I Dream Too Much," staring Henry Fonda and Lily Pons. Tickets to the event are free and may be acquired by sending a self addressed stamped envelope to: Lilypons, 6800 Lilypons Road, P.O. Box 10, Lilypons, Maryland 21717-0010.

Lilypons is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from noon until 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Whatever the choice for waterscaping, Lilypons offers many items that add a special touch to a water garden. Here, Charles Thomas shows just a few of those items.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

What do you do on a Sunday afternoon? Maybe you visit friends, read the Sunday paper, take a nap or watch television.

This past Sunday I broke from traditional activities and had a real adventure. What did I do? A group from the North Museum in Lancaster and I went whitewater rafting on the Lehigh River. It was like riding a bucking bronco for 18 miles.

After a hearty 6 a.m. breakfast, we were bused to the rafting headquarters and fitted with a wet suit. It was skin tight from chin to ankle and on our feet we wore heavy rubber booties. Our raft slid down a steep incline and after we climbed in, we started on an unforgettable experience.

As the water was 8 feet above normal, we accomplished the run in four hours instead of the ususal five or six hours. The big rocks that usually stick five or six feet out of the water were hidden and only a few were visible. They were just waiting to "get" us.

I've never worked so hard on a Sunday as we had to that day–it was paddle or else. I was in front of a five-woman rubber raft. As we paddled through the rapids, we were often hit full force with a wall of water and almost dislodged from our round rubber perch.

Three men fell in and I saw one woman fall in who lost her glasses. I decided that if I fell in I would not lose mine. Well, my time came and as I headed for the deep, I grabbed the paddle in one hand and my glasses in the other. When I surfaced, everyone and his brother were yelling directions at me. "Keep your feet headed downstream so that you don't hit your head on a rock, grab the rope, do the scissors kick, etc." Finally a raft with five men in it pulled me out of the raging waters after I grabbed unto a kayak. I helped them paddle until they could return me to my companions who were concerned about me since they had not seen me being rescued.

I would recommend this adventure for young folks and risk-taking older ones. Even then, pick a day when the water is not so tumultuous. We certainly got our money's worth.

RAISIN GRIDDLE COOKIES

3½ cups sifted flour
1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup shortening
1 egg
½ cup milk
1¼ cups raisins

Sift dry ingredients together into bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture is mealy. Beat egg, add milk and blend. Add egg mixture and raisins to flour mixture. Stir until all ingredients are moistened and dough holds together. Roll on lightly-floured board to ¼-inch thickness. Cut with 2-inch round cookie cutter.

Heat griddle to about 325°F., oil lightly and place cookies on it. As the bottoms brown, the tops become puffy. Then turn and brown on other side. Serve warm. Makes about 4 dozen.

To make Lemon Griddle Cookies, omit raisins and add 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Pack unbaked cookies in freezer containers with pieces of foil between them; freeze. Then a few cookies may be removed from the freezer at any time. Let thaw at room temperature for 15 to 20 minutes.

QUESTION - Mrs. Betty Biehl, Mertztown, would like a recipe for a moist chocolate or white (or both) cake to serve 50 or more people. She would also like recipes for good cheese cakes, honey cookies and honey cake.

QUESTION - Andrew C Keener, Womelsdorf, would like a recipe for veal head soup.

QUESTION - Esther Kurtz, Elverson, would like recipes for bundt cakes.

QUESTION - Hattie Diehl, Mifflinburg, would like a recipe for making homemade soap using wood ashes.

QUESTION - Joan Young, Lititz, would like a French bread pizza recipe.

ANSWER - B.L. of Kintuersville, requested a cream of mushroom soup recipe. The following recipe comes from Dwayne Roland, Westover. The second recipe, for Mushroom Potato Soup, is from Funk's Farm Market, Millersville.

Cream of Mushroom Soup

1 teaspoon finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup or ¼ pound chopped fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1/8 teaspoon pepper
3 cups chicken consomme

Saute onion and mushrooms in butter, then add salt, pepper and flour. Stir until smooth and bubbly Add to hot chicken broth and put into jars. Process in hot water bath 3 hours. Add cream when opened and heated.

Mushroom Potato Soup

1 pound mushrooms
1 medium onion
2 tablespoons butter
4 cups chicken broth
2 cups light cream
4 leeks (or 2 medium onions)
3 cups raw potatoes, small, diced

Trim the roots and green tops from 4 leeks. Cut the leeks in half, the long way, and wash well under running water. Be sure to get all the sand out. Cut the leeks in ½-inch slices; there should be about 2 cups Peel and chop, not too fine, 1 medium onion. (If onions are substituted for leeks, chop 3 onions.)

Melt 2 tablespoons of butter in a 4-quart pot and cook the leeks and onions slowly, for 5 minutes, covered, stirring from time to time

Add 3 cups of diced potatoes and 4 cups of chicken broth. Cover and simmer the soup for 25 minutes Add 1 pound of whole mushrooms and simmer, covered, for 10 more minutes.

Pour 2 cups of soup into an electric blender and blend for about a minute, using highest speed Add another cup and blend some more. Continue until all the soup is blended. The blender will have to be emptied 3 times.

After blending, there will be 2 quarts of thick soup. This will have to be thinned down to serve. It can be kept in the refrigerator longer if it is stored before adding milk or cream. This soup freezes well and if some is to be frozen, it is best to do it before thinning it down.

To prepare 4 servings, heat 3 cups of blended soup with 1 cup of milk or cream and slowly bring it to a boil. Remove from heat. If a thinner soup is desired, add more milk or cream. Store or freeze the rest.

ANSWER - Wanda Brookhart, Liverpool, requested a recipe to can apple juice. The following information comes from "How to Can," a publication produced by the Penn State Extension Service.

Canned Apple Juice

Good quality apple juice is made from a blend of varieties. For best results, buy fresh juice from a local cider maker within 24 hours after it has been pressed.

Refrigerate juice for 24 hours. Without mixing, carefully pour off clear liquid and discard sediment. Strain clear liquid through a paper coffee filter.

To hot pack, heat juice quickly, stirring occasionally, until juice just reaches the boiling point. Fill immediately into pre-sterilized pint, quart, or half-gallon jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process pints or quarts 5 minutes (1,000 ft. elevation), 6 minutes (1,000-2,000 ft. elevation), or 7 minutes (2,000-3,000 ft.) Process half gallons 10 minutes at (1,000 ft), 11 minutes (1,000-2,000 ft.) or 12 minutes (2,000-3,000 ft.)

Kid's Korner

Every student is a star in one-room school

TYLERTON, Md. — The listing of fourth-grade activities in "Tylerton Times," the mimeographed monthly newsletter of the Tylerton School, sounds familiar to anyone who has ever been around an elementary school: "4th grade is doing column addition with four-digit numbers, is subtracting 3-digit numbers, has a reading test Tues."

There is a difference, though: At Tylerton School, the fourth grade consists only of 10-year-old Melissa Tull. That's all.

Welcome to Tylerton School, a modern one-room school on Smith Island in Chesapeake Bay, where this year's student body has 10 pupils and the faculty consists of a teacher/principal and a teacher's aide.

Country Stalwart

One-room, one-teacher schools once were the backbone of education in rural America. In the second decade of this century, half of the nation's schoolchildren were enrolled in about 212,000 one-room schools, and as recently as the 1947-48 school year, just over 75,000 one-teacher schools remained.

But increased urbanization and suburbanization, the widespread belief that large consolidated schools could do a better job, and improved transportation combined to decimate one-teacher schools. By the 1982-83 school year, only 798 remained, leading the federal Office of Educational Research and Improvement to conclude: "The one-teacher school is disappearing from America."

Since then, however, the numbers have begun to turn around, if only slightly. As of the fall of 1984, a study for Brigham Young University's Center for the Study of Rural Education found 837 one-teacher public schools. Like many other institutions whose demise has been prematurely mourned, the one-room school refuses to die.

In part, this is a matter of geography. Most surviving one-room schools are in places like Tylerton, sparsely populated and isolated from other schools.

Most such schools are in the wide-open spaces of the West, like Cherry County, Neb., with 6,700 residents, 800 grade schoolers, and 20 one-room schools. In 1982-83, only six states had 30 or more one-teacher schools, and those six contained 81 percent of the national total: Nebraska, by far the leader with 354; Montana, South Dakota, California, Alaska, and Wyoming. By comparison, only eight states east of the Mississippi River had any remaining one-teacher schools, 51 in all.

In mythology and in reality, Americans venerated the little one-room schoolhouse, which usually was not red. Andrew Gulliford, who directed a major study of American country schools, writes that the schoolhouse "was the social center of the community, especially in remote areas. All groups met there."

"Rural people knew, however instinctively, that to lose their school meant to lose the focus of their community," Gulliford notes.

Not Necessarily Nice

Not that the one-room school was necessarily such a wonderful place. Fred E.H. Schroeder, a professor at the University of Minnesota, Duluth, wrote a few years ago of the Sunny Crest School in Wisconsin, where he began his teaching career in 1952:

"Ill-lighted by three widely separated windows on each side, the crowded room reeked of kerosene, oil-mopped floors, chalk dust, perspiration, damp wool, and chlorine bleach that was poured into the pit of the attached privy at the rate of a gallon a day."

Still, a one-room schoolhouse has qualities that many Americans are turning to today. Schroeder cites "curricular integration, the personal attention to each pupil, the responsiveness to community values." Ralph Smith, dean of Brigham Young University's school of education, says that these remain in today's one-room schools.

"Many of these schools now have all the modern characteristics an urban school would have: computers, television, field trips, speakers, and the like," Smith says. "Plus they have peer tutoring, the upper grades teaching the lower, individualized instruction, and so on. I think they're better now than they ever have been."

Some of the best qualities of one-room schools can be seen here in Tylerton, a community of about 150 residents separated from the other 350 residents of Smith Island by a two-mile channel, and from the Maryland mainland by Tangier Sound.

Smith Islanders make their living by harvesting oysters and crabs from the fertile waters that surround them. They are a hardy, independent lot, mostly named Evans, Tyler, Marshall, and Bradshaw, and they care about their schools; the current Tylerton School was built in 1974, replacing an older one-room facility dating to 1919.

Posters And Projectors

The school is 50 feet long, 22 feet wide. Light streams through the windows, and the walls are covered with drawings, photographs, posters, inspirational mottoes, and the work of pupils. There are motion-picture and slide projectors, a large television set, a photocopier, a mimeograph machine. A partition divides the area used mostly by upper-grade children from that used by primary-grade pupils.

The entire student body and faculty of Tylerton School — 10 pupils, a teacher/principal, and a teacher's aide — gather in the playground behind the school. One-room schools continue to serve youngsters in isolated communities such as Tylerton, Md., located on Smith Island in the Chesapeake Bay.

Presiding over the school is Alice Evans, "Miss Alice," a main-island native who arrives each morning on the school boat that takes Smith Island high schoolers to the mainland. Her school runs from kindergarten through sixth grade; seventh- and eighth-graders go to junior high in Ewell, across the channel.

There are no kindergartners this year, but there are two first-graders and two second-graders, mostly taught by the aide, "Miss Evelyn" Tyler; one fourth-grader; three fifth-graders; and two sixth-graders. Many activities, such as reports on visits to elderly or ailing

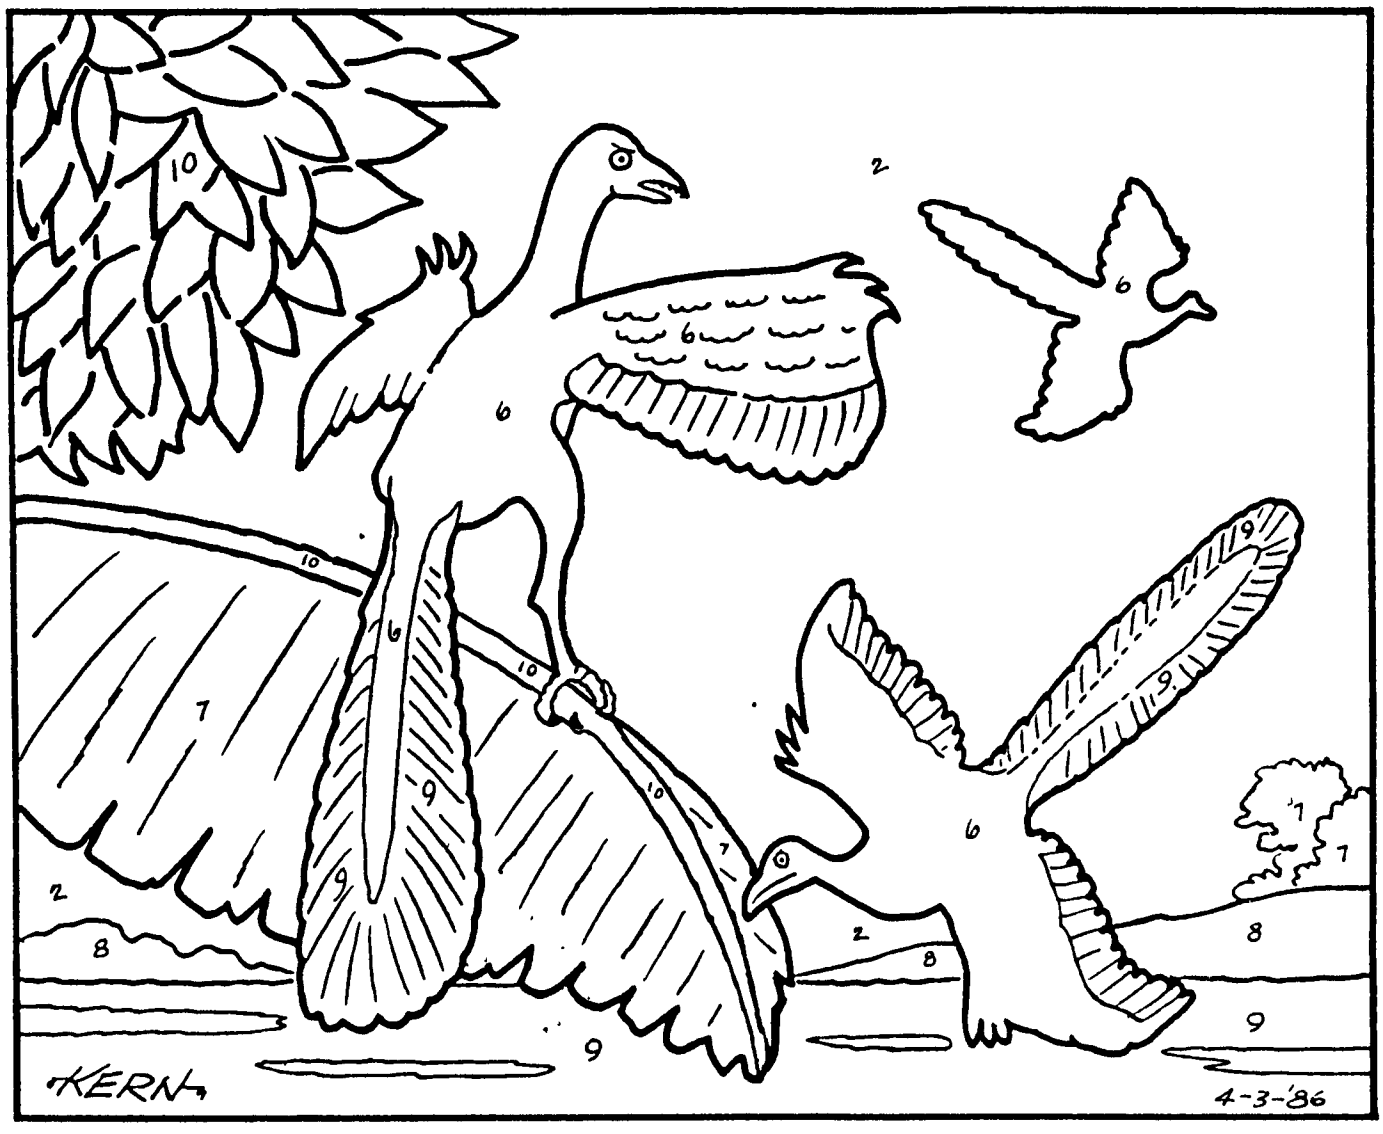
BIRD OF THE PAST: MANY KINDS OF BIRDS THAT ONCE LIVED ON THE EARTH HAVE DISAPPEARED. THE ARCHAEOPTERYX IS THE OLDEST BIRD SCIENTISTS KNOW ABOUT. IT LIVED IN THE DAYS OF THE DINOSAURS. THERE HAVE BEEN NO BIRDS OF THIS KIND FOR 100 MILLION YEARS. THEY ARE KNOW AS "ANCIENT WINGS."



Simple economics.

That's why Deutz-Fahr hay tools treat your hay, and your money, gently.

In 1967, Cummings & Bricker introduced the FAHR HAYMAKER in the Northeast. At that time tedding was thought to be a thing of the past. It didn't take long to prove that theory wrong.

Since that time, over 6000 have been sold in our trade area. In fact, there have been more Fahr Haymakers sold, worldwide, than any other one piece of farm equipment. Over a MILLION!

In the past few years there have been several different makes of tedders introduced, but few have been able to match the quality or the gentle handling of the crop that we have.

When you need a hay tedder, do some shopping. Don't settle for a machine that will only do half of what you really want it to do.

One-room schools

members of the community, involve older and younger children together; for others, such as reading, arithmetic, and science, the two groups are separated.

Because different grades sit side by side, confusion constantly threatens. Mrs. Evans may sit down to hear fourth-grade Melissa Tull read aloud, gently encouraging her, only to be politely interrupted by a question from fifth-grader Jamie Marshall, and again by sixth-grader Jason Tyler. Meanwhile, from beyond the partition can be heard the piping voices of the two first-graders, reading aloud with "Miss Evelyn."

"The one bad thing for me is that I'm run ragged," says Mrs. Evans.

On the other hand, she says, "the pluses far outweigh the minuses. They get a lot of individual attention. A lot of the things we do together, and that's good, too. Melissa, in fourth grade by herself, gets to work with the big guys in fifth and sixth grade. She hears what they're saying, and maybe she's not afraid to voice her own opinion."

Lots of Attention

The amount of attention each child receives during the school day is striking. Every child, not just a few as in larger schools, gets a chance to read, to work on arithmetic at the blackboard, to ask and answer questions. If one pupil is having trouble with a particular subject, the teacher or her aide can take the time to help.

Best of all, though, a day at Tylerton School offers convincing proof that the children do, in fact, learn. One scene is memorable: Toward the end of the day, Evelyn Tyler gathers first-graders Andrew Marshall and Bryan Corbin together on the floor with second-graders Kristy Schoofstall and Craig Tyler, and asks Craig to read to the group while she goes off to prepare for the next day's field trip to the mainland.

For 20 minutes, Craig reads to his three attentive classmates. Only a pair of visitors seem surprised at either his reading ability or the others' attention. Everyone else in the one-room school takes them for granted.

Oily Stains: A Laundry Problem

Oily greasy stains on clothing are a common laundering problem. They can be caused by a number of factors including the use of an insufficient amount of detergent to hold the soil in solution until the end of the wash cycle. To resolve the problem, treat the stains with a prewash stain remover or a liquid laundry detergent. Then, launder with an increased amount of detergent. To prevent the problem, use a sufficient amount of detergent.

A wash water temperature that is too low is another cause. The problem can be remedied by increasing the temperature and can be prevented by using the hottest water safe for the fabric being laundered

Another major cause of oily stains is the incorrect use of a fabric softener. When undiluted fabric softener is poured directly on fabrics, staining can occur. Remove the stains by rubbng with a bar of soap before laundering. To prevent the problem, dilute a liquid fabric softener before adding to the washer.

Problems arising with the use of a dryer-added fabric softener can be caused by drying too small a load, selecting an improper dryer cycle or using too high a temperature. In each instance, remove the stains by rubbing the fabric softener stains with a bar soap, and launder. Prevent a reoccurrence caused by too small a load by adding a few bath towels to the dryer load for proper tumbling. Select the appropriate dryer cycle to avoid stainng caused by an improper cycle selection. If a dryer is too hot, reduce the dryer temperature.

An Update on Sulfites

Sulfites, used extensively in the food industry as a preservative, have been linked with health problems, and even death, in certain people eating sulfite-treated food. Asthmatics are particularly sensitive to sulfites.

In the past year 21 deaths and 500 adverse reactions associated with sulfites have been reported to the Food and Drug Administration, eliciting consumer concern and several FDA recommendations concerning product labeling and use restrictions.

To date, the FDA recommendations are still proposals, not regulations. So consumers have very few food labels and only voluntary restaurant labeling as guides.

The list of foods containing sulfites is extensive–many baked goods, alcoholic beverages, some fruit juices and cola drinks, some condiments, confections, fish products and some seafood, grain products, jams and jellies, nuts, processed fruits and vegetables, snack foods, canned and dried soups, sugars, gravies and sauces, and sweet sauces. The amount of sulfite in each food varies considerably.

When you cook vegetables and grain products at home the sulfites are lost because heating causes volitilization, or evaporation. The same effect minimizes sulfite content in processed (canned, frozen and baked) foods. The foods that appear to cause the most problems are fresh fruits and vegetables used for display such as in salad bars, along with dried fruits and instant potatoes.

Forty percent of the sulfite complaints received by the FDA were associated with raw fruits and vegetables in restaurants. Last August FDA proposed banning the use of sulfites on raw or processed fruits and vegetables which are served or sold to consumers as fresh in food service establishments. In November the agency added prescription drugs to the list, proposing a mandatory warning label on all drugs containing sulfites. A proposal tightenig food labeling standards has also been proposed.

Until some action is taken to change these proposals into enforceable regulations, consumers, especially those who suffer from asthma or other allergies, should carefully consider what foods they eat.

Read all food and drug ingredient labels carefully for any mention of the sulfiting agents used in food and drugs. Look for sulfide dioxide, sodium and potassium sulfite, sodium and potassium bisulfite, and sodium and potassium metabisulfite.

Avoid eating dried fruits and processed potato products.

If a sign is not posted, ask the managers of restaurants with salad bars if sulfites are used in food preparation.

Drink alcohol in moderation.

Summer camping trips are easier with Camp Stamps

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Camping in National Forests will be more convenient and economical than ever before because of Camp Stamps, which provide a 15 percent discount on camping fees.

Campers may purchase Camp Stamps from Forest Service offices or at participating local merchants before arriving at a campground. With the discount, for example, campers can purchase stamps valued at $10 for $8.50.

The stamps come in various denominations and are color coded for ease of use.

After arriving at the campground, campers can pay for their stay by using the stamps instead of cash. This is done by affixing the stamps to the fee envelope and depositing them insead of cash at self-service fee stations.

Camp Stamps benefit both campers and the Forest Service. They can eliminate the problem of having the exact change to insert in the self-service fee collection stations. They also help reduce administrative costs for the Forest Service by reducing the need to collect and count cash, make change, process checks and deposit funds.

For more information on Camp Stamps, contact your local Forest Service office or send a postcard to Camp Stamps, Forest Service, USDA, Dept. B, P.O. Box 2417, Washington, DC 20013.

Martinsburg teen is new Blair County dairy princess

BY BETSY STITT
Staff Correspondent

ROARING SPRING — Laurie Smith of Martinsburg R2 was crowned Blair County dairy princess April 25 during the annual pageant at the Spring Cove Junior High School.

Laurie, the daughter of Dennis and Margaret Smith, received her crown from 1985 princess Sheila Biddle.

During the event, contestants were asked questions to test their knowledge of the dairy industry. Laurie was asked: "How do you persuade a football player who thinks milk is for sissies that it is good for him?"

Laurie responded that it takes a big person to stand up to the crowd who is drinking soda pop and to be different by drinking milk. She would also tell him to look at the many major league athletes who drink milk.

Laurie is a junior at Central High School, where she is involved in the Girl's Athletic Association, Concert Chorus, Health Careers Club and National Honor Society. She is a member of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church.

Laurie lives with her parents on the family's 200-acre dairy farm and helps milk the 59 Holsteins.

Jenny Bigelow, Williamsburg, was named alternate princess. She is the daughter of William and June Bigelow. Jenny is a junior at Huntingdon Christian Academy, where she is a member of the volleyball and basketball teams. She plays the piano and organ at the Calvary Bible Church.

Jenny is a member of the 4-H dairy club, 4-H baby beef club and the Blair County dairy judging team. She helps milk 50 Holsteins and Brown Swiss on her family's 146-acre farm.

Sheila Biddle crowns Blair County's new dairy princess Laurie Smith as alternate Jenny Bigelow looks on.

Sheila Biddle, 1985 Blair County dairy princess, showed a slide presentation of her very busy year. She wrote over 20 newspaper articles, recorded 43 radio spots and spoke to over 100 classes of school children. She also appeared in numerous parades in an old-fashioned milk wagon her family made for her.

Another highlight of the evening was a parade of future dairy princesses. Over 20 girls aged 4 to 12 participated in the parade.

Pat Bowers of WKMC/WHPA Radio served as mistress of ceremonies. Judges for the contest were Dr. Donald Evans, assistant dean of Extension at Penn State; Mrs. Mary Ann Snider, Bedford County dairy farm wife, and Mrs. Judy Shade, a member of the Huntingdon County dairy promotion committee.

After the pageant, everyone adjourned to the cafeteria for a pie and ice cream social.

Bucks, Montgomery youth to attend PAFC Institute

CREAMERY — Five youths from the Bucks-Montgomery County area have been selected to attend the Pennsylvania Association of Farmers' Cooperatives Summer Institute, July 6 to 9, at Juniata College, Huntingdon.

The youths, representing their 4-H Clubs and FFA Chapters, were selected from 14 participants attending the annual One-Day Institute of the Bucks-Montgomery PAFC Council. The event was recently hosted by the Montgomery County Extension Service, Creamery.

Those to attend the Summer Institute are: Tricia McMahon, Green Lane, Montgomery County 4-H; Joe Fitzgerald, Philadelphia, W.B. Saul FFA Chapter; Beth Kent, Lansdale, Montgomery County 4-H; Renee Quigley, Pottstown, West Montgomery FFA; and Rick Troxel, Perkasie, Bucks County 4-H. Alternates are Craig Kinsky, Lansdale, Montgomery County 4-H; and Chenita Thompson, Philadelphia, W.B. Saul FFA Chapter.

Miss McMahon is a second-year PAFC scholar and will participate in the agribusiness explorers program. The remaining 4-H and FFA members are first-year scholars. Their selection was based on an activities report and a quiz on cooperatives.

The PAFC Summer Institute is held each year and is geared toward helping high school youth learn about cooperatives and the services they provide their members.

Help keep grandparent/grandchild relationship strong

NEWARK, Del. — The smell of fresh-baked cookies fills the house. Grandmother wipes her hands on her apron and calls grandfather in from the garden to see Susie and Tommy, who've stopped in for a visit on their way home from school. They all enjoy an afternoon snack together and discuss the events of their day.

This scene may come to mind when one thinks of an ideal grandparent/grandchild relationship. But it's often far from realistic. Many grandparents have full-time jobs, as do mothers and fathers, and children are often involved in after-school lessons and activities. Many grandparents don't even live in the same town as their grandchildren. The fact is, most grandparents and grandchildren don't have the luxury of enjoying each other's company on a regular basis. But that doesn't mean they can't find other ways to express their affection.

"Grandparents may not be able to see their grandchildren as often as they'd like, for many reasons," says Sally Foulke, University of Delaware extension home economist. "It may be because of divorce, death, custody problems or simply geographic distance. In any case, the relationship between grandparents and grandchildren is a special one with both parties suffering when contact is infrequent."

Whatever the cause of separation, the following tips from Foulke can help keep grandparent/grandchild relationships strong.

Storytelling can take place across the miles through cassette recordings. Stories taped while children are visiting will have the added bonus of their comments. If a story is taped in their absence, Foulke suggests grandparents personalize the tale by addressing children by name throughout the recording. These personalized stories can be played on long car trips, at naptime or whenever parents or grandparents are too busy to concentrate on reading aloud.

Give grandchildren a picture of grandparents to carry around, says the home economist. A photograph of grandparents holding a telephone can help little ones visualize them during a phone call.

When writing to grandchildren, consider using low-cost kiddie stationery made from leftover scraps of wrapping paper. Even children too young to read can enjoy hearts and x's drawn with felt tip pen, Foulk says. A smiling face with glasses or another symbol can become grandma's or grandpa's special sign.

Older grandchildren enjoy receiving family news, says Foulke. Frequent one-page newsletters with copies going to all members of a far-flung family is a good way to keep in touch. Kids love to read about themselves and their cousins. And it's exciting for them to realize that grandparents admire their accomplishments enough to feature them in a family newsletter.

"Maybe all granchildren can't eat homemade cookies and listen to tales of the 'good ole days' with their grandparents," says Foulke, "but it's possible to maintain a good relationship in many other creative ways."

Select foods from four food groups for good nutrition

PITTSBURGH — American ingenuity is alive and well in the health and nutrition field. Thanks to new research techniques and increasing interest in health and nutrition, we are benefiting from findings that will increase the quality and the length of human life. But meanwhile, back at reality, the ink is hardly dry on new research findings before there is someone with a pill or a book to meet our needs!

Take fiber as an example, something abundant in our food supply in whole grains and fruits and vegetables. By definition, dietary fiber is material from plant cells and is either non-digestible or only partially digested, making it available as roughage for the body. Fiber can help to prevent constipation and to promote a healthy digestive tract.

Cereals such as shredded wheat, bran or wheat flakes or even oatmeal are good starts for a fiber-full day. Add to this whole grain, breads and such foods as barley, buckwheat grouts, bulgar, cornmeal or even pasta, and you have more fiber.

In the fruit and vegetable case you find even more variety. From the common apple to the more exotic artichoke or garbanzo beans there is fiber to be found.

For years dietitians and nutritionists have been advising a minimum of four servings a day of a variety of fruits and vegetables and four servings a day of grain products. Obviously, the message is not as exciting to the public as the new rage of best sellers in the fiber line. Cereal that looks and often tastes like shredded bark; raw bran to sprinkle on everything that doesn't move; and of course books and articles to read. Suddenly fiber, something grandma called roughage, is "in" and anything "in" signals money to American ingenuity.

Another nutrient with the "in" appeal these days is calcium. It is as though osteoporosis was just discovered, something that is far from the truth. And good old American ingenuity is finding all sorts of easy ways for us to get calcium and ward off osteoporosis. Flour is soon to be fortified with calcium, extra calcium is being added to beverages and any product with calcium has a new advertising pitch. Perhaps the height of the calcium fever is the announcement that a diet soda that has slipped in popularity may soon be laced with calcium.

Going back to the advice of dietitians and nutritionists, we all know that dairy products, certain green vegetables such as kale and broccoli, and soy products such as tofu are sources of calcium. In fact, one eight-ounce carton of milk on the cafeteria line offers almost 300 milligrams of calcium.

Considering that the daily need for calcium is between 800-1200 milligrams, one can be well on their way by following the advice of good nutrition. That is two servings of dairy products for young children and most adults, and three to four servings per day for teens and pregnant women. Add to this the calcium found in the other food groups and you have a start to building good bone health.

The issue with calcium, fiber and any number of other health and nutrition related "in" topics is not so easily solved solely by diet. It has been said that good nutrition will not ensure good health but bad nutrition will guarantee poor health. Heart disease, cancer, diabetes, osteoporosis, most such health problems are complicated conditions. No one factor can cause, prevent or even cure.

Each of us brings our own genetic background, and we each have a past and present lifestyle that further complicate the picture. Smoking, lack of exercise, weight control problems, failure to handle stress, as well as our food choices or "diet" are just some of the factors that contribute to health problems. Correcting diet can be a step to prevention but it is certainly not a guarantee.

Food is still the best source of nutrition. Isolating a single factor such as calcium, or fiber, doesn't allow the body the opportunity to have the mix of nutrients necessary for health. For example, calcium requires the presence of Vitamin D and the right acid/base mix for use in the body. Some of the calcium pills on the market offer neither. Fiber in large amounts can interfere with other nutrients or irritate the stomach or intestines.

One last word on experts. Freedom of speech and and of the press are treasured rights in our country. But, where does it say that what is said or printed has to be true? That means the public has to be wise decision makers. Remember to check the credentials of the "expert."

If you have a question go to a recognized expert such as the dietitians in local hospitals, nutritionists at the local Dairy & Nutrition Council or public health department or the dietetics staff at the local university.

And above all, remember that poor eating habits can't be counteracted by any known pill or by following the advice of the "expert" promising quick and easy results.

Recycling patterns saves on clothing costs

MEDIA — Tempted by fresh spring fabrics now in the shops? In need of new clothing for a new season but short on cash? With a little ingenuity, you really can sew and save, suggests Maryetta Dorricott, Delaware County Extension home economist.

For most of us, using a pattern is a one time thing, so putting that pattern to double use is a great way to extend your sewing dollar. Here are a few things to keep in mind as you go through your old patterns with an eye to using them again:

• Be aware of current fashion and your clothing needs for the spring and summer seasons.

• Sort through your patterns and evaluate each one according to its size, style, and whether or not it can be modified without major changes in construction.

• Save patterns that are still fashionable and suitable to your way of life. Remember that hem length changes, stylish accessories, and seasonal colors may do a lot to make a five-year-old pattern still useful.

• Save patterns that have details that are still appealing and flattering. You may love the skirt on a dress pattern but the bodice seems dated. Don't discard the whole thing. Use parts separately or combine them with elements of another pattern.

• Plan a new life for your discards. Exchange patterns with friends, sell them at a garage sale, or donate them to a local community group. But before you pass them along, be sure they're in good shape.

• Worn patterns can be strengthened by backing them with lightweight non-woven press-on interfacing fabric. You can also replace them by tracing onto tissue paper or a non-woven pattern duplicating material.

Travel Plans

Where will it be this week? That's the weekly question asked in regard to our vacation plans for the summer. It seems that we cannot come to some resolution of where we are going when! The only thing resolved so far is that we can't wait for a vacation.

Are you planning or looking forward to a vacation? Just the thought of enjoying some warm, sunshiny beach has helped to get me through the past two hectic and rainy weeks.

Vacations in my family involved big family planning. We spent three days camping with another family and those summer trips formed vacation memories that we still laugh about and enjoy. As young campers, one of the biggest thoughts on our minds was purchasing enough candy and gum to get us through the long ride to the campground. We'd enjoy packing up the pick-up truck with the gear and piling in for the ride.

Many people carry around the notion that young families must give up real vacations until the children are grown. Of course, some vacations are not at all suited to young children, but there are lots of vacations that can be fun and refreshing for the whole family.

Planning is the key word to a successful vacation. First consider where you are going. Will the sights be of interest to young children?

Preschoolers will not enjoy museums. School-age children may enjoy them as much as adults, but they tire much faster than adults. With very small children, it is best to keep some familiarity in the surroundings. A new bed, different water, and strange food all at the same time is quite a bit for any youngster to handle.

Decide how you'll get there. Long days of driving cross-country are hard on the patience of some adults and its worse for children. Planning stops at parks and playgrounds make the drive much easier.

Some airlines will make special provisions for babies and preschoolers if you notify them before take-off time. It's also a good idea to choose an uncrowded flight for children. That means more space for them to move around, and often more attention from the flight attendants. They may have special equipment, such as bassinets or youth seats, to help make your child more comfortable.

It's no fun being sick on a vacation. If you take prescription medicines with you, be sure to have a copy of the prescription itself in case the medication has to be replaced. You may want to take along an anti-nauseant for those who have trouble with motion sickness.

If you have planned this far, you next stop is deciding what to take along. Check out the expected weather for your destination — don't assume that every place is warm in July! Plan what clothes everyone will need for the activities that you'll be doing. If you want to, run through your itinerary day by day to help you decide, then take just those things — don't over pack. I've learned that too much clothing just results in more to carry around and more wash upon return.

Children are naturally active, so you can expect them to be uncomfortable if they're asked to sit still for long periods of time. Allow them to take along a favorite toy or pack a variety of small surprise packages to be opened at intervals during the trip. However, make sure these surprise toys are compatible with the travel situation. Finger puppets, picture cards, washable foam blocks, or an art pad with washable crayons are good choices.

Well, most of your planning is finished to this point, but there is one more thing you can do to help your preschooler prepare for the trip. Talk about the trip casually several weeks before you go to get him used to the idea.

If he seems particularly anxious, you may want to sit down with him and explain, in as much detail as you can, what it will be like there and what you'll see. Young children are often concerned about things that adults take for granted. He may ask such things as, "Where will I sleep?, How will we know where we are?, Who will make supper for us?, or "Will there be other children there?" You should answer these questions to the best of your knowledge without making up answers. Although he probably cannot comprehend a time span in days or weeks, you may need to assure him that you will return home soon.

Careful advance preparations will make your vacation a lot more enjoyable for everyone. Now, if we just could agree on our vacation location we could get on with the planning!

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"Geese!" came the call early one morning last week as the clouds hung dark and heavy, and raindrops tip-toed into the grass.

"What?" was my initial reaction. After all, the flocks of Canadian geese transients had long ago waved their wings over the farm on their way north.

"No! At the pond!" came the details.

Sure enough, on the bank hugging the farm pond stood two majestic Canadian geese. A second look a few minutes later revealed that two more were in the flotilla cutting "V" shapes across the watery surface.

Before long, they had meandered up toward the barn and were taking stock of the place from the far side of the runoff-control pond. Plenty of tender grass shoots and grain residue from cattle waste in the meadow had provided breakfast nibbling along the way.

Apparently these four feathered friends—two pairs, or maybe four unattached bachelors?—liked what they found. That evening, they were still hanging around.

But, by that time they had spied grazing grounds more to their liking: the protein-rich, new growth of our most lush hayfield, just below the backyard fence.

Wild geese—or at least the few geese that have stopped by here in their travels—have never come very close to the farm buildings. These were either carefree daredevils or had somewhere in their journeys become accustomed to farmsteads.

While we kept the kitchen windows and the binoculars busy with our shameless, long-distance spying, several of the cats voted for a closer look. They crept under the fence, and began stalking our beautiful visitors through the foot-high alfalfa.

Super-smart birds that they are, the geese, naturally, never missed the move of one cat hair. Four long, black necks were poked above the thick foliage, their heads turned in the direction of the advancing feline army. It looked for all the world like four weather-vanes pointed into the wind.

Such a stare-down technique eventually halted the advancing cats, with one exception. Rett (no I didn't name him!), beloved housecat, and basically a lover rather than a fighter, would protect his family single-handedly if necessary, against these interlopers. Let the other cat cowards quit; he would press on.

So the tiger-striped advance through the leafy greenery continued, every move watched by the heads sticking out from above the alfalfa. We, too, watched almost breathlessly from the house, just waiting for the fur and feathers to fly. After all, this prey was not a baby house mouse, one of Rett's usual stalking targets.

One ill-conceived dash at these big, fowl strangers and Rett would be sporting a dented heat under his beige-and-black racing stripes.

Five minutes, ten minutes, the standoff dragged out.

And then, a silent truce of some sort was apparently struck. The geese began working their way off through the field, and Rett turned tail, slinking back toward the yard. The classic duel between bird and cat was not going to take the calamitous turn we had feared.

And one cat had more common sense than we originally planned to credit him with.

In case anyone ever asks you where the term "Wild Goose Chase" originated, now you know. It was coined by a furry friend of this household who knew when to quit a purposeless pursuit before he was painfully pecked.

Just stash that fact in your "Trivia" file for future reference.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Microwave Cookbooks, Look Before You Buy!

Mother's Day is coming up in two weeks, believe it or not! If your Mom has a microwave, she just might appreciate a new microwave cookbook as a gift, especially if she doesn't use her microwave much.

Here are a few hints for choosing a cookbook she (or you!) will like. Microwave cookbooks are available in book stores, in microwave retail outlets, and microwave catalogs. (One mail-order catalog is MICROWAVE AND MORE, 961 Lyell Ave., Rochester, N.Y. 14606).

When you look through a book think about what kind of cooking your mom does. If her cooking is limited to packaged convenience mixes, look for a book that tells how to use these mixes in a microwave. If she makes most of her food from scratch, look for books that use homemade sauces instead of canned soup for sauces. If she has diet limitations, look for these. I'm sure you get the idea by now.

Check the publication date on the book. Cookbooks that were published more than five or six years ago and have not been revised since then, will not utilize the "easy cooking" features on newer microwaves like variable power, temperature probes, or sensors.

One last thing to look for is the power of the microwave used to test and time the recipes. You will find this information in the front of the book, usually in a forward, or a section called, "how to use this book", etc. If the power level is different from your mother's oven, she might have to adjust all the cooking times. Most books written in the last few years are for ovens with 600 to 700 watts of power. If the cookbook was published before 1978, it may be for a lower powered oven.

There are many microwave cookbooks available, and as with any cookbook, some are better than others. Here are my favorite cookbooks. I use these five regularly and like them. One would make a nice gift for someone with a microwave oven.

The cookbook I think is best is still (after seven years!) the paperback, Let's Cook Microwave, Third Edition, by Barbara Harris. This book is easy to use and has good basic information on the differences between microwave and range cooking. If you know someone who has a microwave that's not being used much, they need this book!

In Harris' book I've found directions for anything I've ever tried to cook in my microwave, from whole pumpkins to play dough! Most book stores don't stock this book, but can special order it for you. The book is available from many microwave retail stores and catalogs. The cost? A friendly $5.25 for the paperback and $7.95 for the spiral binding.

Another favorite microwave cookbook is Audrey Stehle's, Microwave Cooking Made Easy, published by Southern Living. This has a good "basics" section in the front and some of the best food that I've made in my microwave has come from the recipes in this book. You'll find "good eatin" here, though most of the recipes are not really quick ones. This hardbound sells for about $18 at the bookstores.

The newest cookbook on my shelf is Simply Scrumptious Microwaving, by Wilkins, Robinson and Stancil. This spiral bound paperback ($9.95) has almost 600 recipes in it, but has only a brief explanation of microwave techniques. If your mother uses her microwave a lot and is looking for new recipes, this might be what she needs.

If your mother is a gourmet cook or likes French or Italian cooking, look for Snyder and Cone's books, The Microwave French Cookbook, or The Microwave Italian Cookbook. These hardbounds $15.50) give microwave directions for authentic ethnic recipes. Their recipes are easy, faster than conventional, and delicious.

I haven't personally tested these next few books, but they should be more reliable than one from an author with whom you are not familiar.

Better Homes and Gardens has published a series of books on microwave cooking. Each one is a different theme, such as Microwave Cooking For Kids, Microwave Plus (using your range, grill and freezer along with your microwave). The Microwave Cooking for One or Two would be especially nice for a single person. Most of these are hardbacks for about $7; the paperbacks are a dollar less.

If your mother needs help understanding microwave cooking techniques, either Betty Crocker's Microwave Cookbook or the General Electric Microwave Cookbook should help her (or you!). These hardback books are jammed full of pictures of techniques and doneness tests. They range in price from $12 to $15.

One last suggestion is a subscription to a microwave magazine. The best is The Microwave Times, Box 1271, Burnsville, Minnesota 55337. It costs $8.95 for a year's subscription (6 issues–every other month). It contains recipes, product reports, reader's questions, etc.

If you need to special order one of these books and a book store says the one you want is not available, try a different store. The chain stores each have different suppliers. When I called about availability of these books, one store told me I couldn't get the book, another had it available for order. These books are all still available!

So what's the final word? Just this – before you buy a microwave cookbook, browse through it to make sure its style matches your mother's!

THE FASTEST MOWER/CONDITIONERS IN THE WORLD.

When conditions get tough the Vicon KM 241, KM 281 and KM 321 Mower Conditioners can get your hay in the windrow at least 30% faster than any conventional system.

One reason is the unique high speed Vicon disc cutting system. Which won't plug. And it's so gentle on your hay crop there's virtually no leaf loss.

The Vicon eliminates the most common cutting and conditioning problems, even if it's heavy, dew wet crop. The full width nylon rollers provides the maximum conditioning effect on the entire crop.

Another reason is a new drive system that lets you operate non stop. Even taking square corners with no drive line vibration or danger of failure. As a practical value to farmers, the Vicon mower conditioners are efficient, economical and durable.

We'd like to show you how to improve your mowing and conditioning. Just contact the Vicon office closest to you.

A-Day held at Delaware Valley College

DOYLESTOWN — A-Day, a time hen Delaware Valley College resents its finest to the public, as held last weekend on the llege campus in Bucks County.

Visitors enjoyed old-fashioned ntests in logsawing, canoe-usting on Lake Archer, pie-ating and a milking competition.

Other events held during the two ay fair were: fitting and howmanship contests for beef, sheep, swine and dairy cattle; an extensive flower and garden show; an art show; music concerts and special children attractions.

Displays concerning biology, chemistry, food science, business, agronomy and horticulture were also open for public inspection.

All of the events and exhibits were prepared and presented by the students and faculty of the college.

Preparing her Hereford for the show was Lisa Roerig, (right) a junior at the college. Assisting her was Andy Lindsay.

Flower shows and beef shows were just two of the many events which unfolded during Delaware Valley College's 38th A-Day.

Warren Hills FFA won the overall team competition. Team members were: John Torrance, Tracy Sodtablars, Erich Sodtablars and Scott Landis.

Winning the dairy 4-H contest was the Lebanon County team of Dale Burun, Nelson Bomgardner, Mike Kunkle and Becky Sonnon.

The FFA team from Solanco came in first in that competition with team members: Joe Delong, Tom Arrowsmith, Tom Wiker and Mark Hess.

Kennard-Dale FFA honors outstanding members

FAWN GROVE — Members of the Kennard-Dale FFA held their annual Parent-Member Banquet April 14 in the Kennard-Dale High School cafeteria. A family-style turkey dinner was served to about 200 people.

The Chapter officers planned and took part in the banquet program with chapter vice-president Mike Heim serving as the toastmaster.

Kelly O'Brien, chapter chaplain, gave the invocation and Tom Parks, chapter secretary, gave the welcome. Kelly Whitmer, the sentinel, introduced special guests. Brian McCleary, chapter treasurer, presented the sales awards to individual high salesman in the year's fund raising activities.

Mr. Allen, Mr. Travis, and Mr. Wright then presented several awards earned by members during the past year. Recognized for receiving their York County FFA degree, the White Rose degree, were the following: Brian DeVoe, Ed Gross, Randy Gross, Mike Hiem, Kelly O'Brien, Tom Parks, and Kelly Whitmer.

Thirty-two members were recognized for placing in the York County FFA Project Book Contest held in January. Medals were presented to project book winners in the State Project Book Contest.

Awards in the form of pins were presented to members who placed in State Competition at FFA Week last June at Penn State University.

Tackle housekeeping chores by cleaning as you go

YORK — Clean as you go is today's golden rule of housekeeping. Perhaps partial cleaning is more accurate. Quick suds and water treatment lengthens the time between thorough scrubbings. With less buildup of soil, heavy duty cleaning is also made easier, says A. Joan Lamberson, Penn State Extension home economist.

Take the kitchen, for example. When cleaning up after a meal, use a sudsy sponge to wipe all surfaces soiled by food preparation. This might include the range top, reflector bowls, control knobs and oven door. Fresh splatters on an oven interior are easy to clean as soon as the oven cools and prevents food from "burning on" with subsequent oven use. Sponge off the surfaces and cords of portable appliances after use. Refrigerator/freezer and cabinet door handles also benefit from frequent wipings.

Work weekly or occasional small chores into after-dinner dishwashing and the kitchen will always be relatively clean without much ado. Include such things as soap and scouring pad holders, the back splash area of counters and sink, the meatkeeper and vegetable bins of the refrigerator, the crumb tray of the toaster.

The same principles apply to the bathroom — another area of the house that tends to get messy fast. Ideally, every member of the family should be responsible for cleaning up. Though small children can't be expected to do a bangup job, this is the time to begin instilling the habit.

Prompt wiping of shower walls prevents mineral deposits and soap scum from becoming embedded. The tub should also be cleaned right away, before soil dries and requires more effort to remove. Some cleanser or sink cleaner poured into the basin and wiped up with a sponge helps in removing dabs of toothpaste, makeup, shaving cream and beard stubble. As an encouragement, be sure cleaning supplies, sponges, cleaning cloths and paper towels are handy. Soiled towels and clothing should be removed immediately to the laundry or placed in a hamper.

Keep clutter under control throughout the house by picking up and putting away items immediately. Keep up with the quick cleanups and spread out the cleaning that takes more time. To stem procrastination, designate certain times to tackle special cleanup projects. With this kind of plan, even the busiest of households can keep up appearances.

New cucumber is sweet, fights off insects

WASHINGTON — A cucumber that stays sweet while it fights off insects and plant diseases has been developed by U.S. Department of Agriculture and University of Nebraska scientists.

The cucumber, "County Fair 83," is ideal for home gardens, says Clinton E. Peterson, horticulturist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service at Madison, Wis. Differing in size and color from standard commercial processing varieties, the cucumber is suited for both salads and homemade pickles.

The new cucumber does not become bitter even under severe stress caused by plant disease, drought or inadequate soil nutrients. This helps ward off cucumber beetles that like to munch on vines having a bitter taste.

That's good news, he says, for gardeners who are wary of dousing their plants with insecticides and who are also tired of seeing healthy cucumber crops suddenly destroyed by disease when they are about ready to bear. Cucumber beetles spread the bacteria that cause a wilt disease.

"Bacterial wilt is rarely a problem in commercial fields because of chemical controls that stop the disease-carrying beetle," he said. "But application of these chemicals isn't practical in home gardens. That's why the non-bitter vines are such an advantage."

Peterson, who directed the breeding and testing, says County Fair 83 also is resistant to scab, cucumber mosaic virus, powdery mildew, downy mildew, anthracnose, angular leaf spot, and fusarium wilt.

Cucumbers from County Fair 83 can be grown without seeds, he says. The plant, which is strictly female, will produce seedless cucumbers if they are not fertilized by pollinating insects from nearby pollen-bearing plants.

These seedless cucumbers are slow maturing, he says, and don't lose color and soften on the vine as quickly as normal seed-producing varieties.

The cucumbers will appeal more to home gardeners than to commercial growers, Peterson said. They measure a little more than three inches long when they reach one inch in diameter, longer than standard commercial pickling varieties, and too short for use as commercial fresh-market slicer types. They also don't have the tough skin needed for shipment, he said.

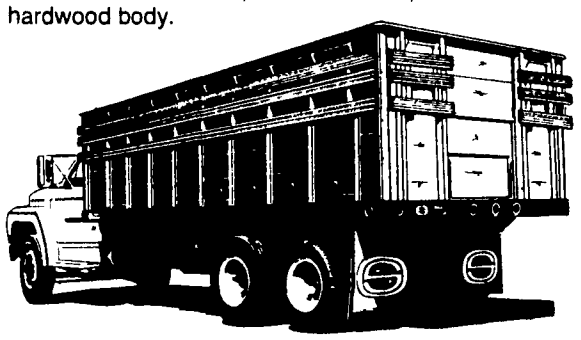
Grain & Livestock Bodies

Bigger than ever, Better than ever. A full 96" wide...

We've built rugged truck bodies for more than 60 years and today we're continuing that tradition. That's the reason you can't make a better investment than an Omaha Standard steel, stakeless steel, aluminum or hardwood body.

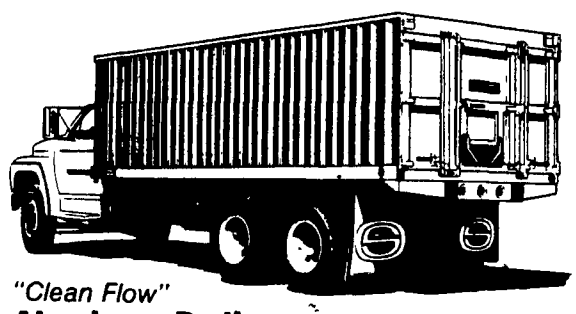


Steel and Hardwood Farm Bodies

- One-piece roll formed steel sides with built-in tarp rail Available in 28", 40" and 52" heights ..all with maximum corrugation for maximum strength
- 40", 48" and 54" hardwood sides also available ..the truck body Omaha Standard built its reputation on.
- Maximum legal width of 96' increases payload.
- The toughest platform in the business — laminated wood, smooth steel, treadplate or steel over wood.
- Easy-conversion fold down stock racks
- Full line of rugged gates .engineered to make your job easier

Omaha Standard Hoists

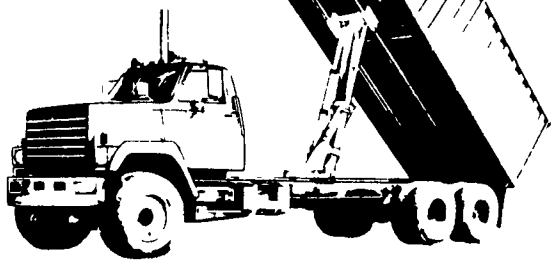
Select a job-matched, precision-engineered Omaha Standard hoist for your Omaha Standard body. Available in fourteen models — scissor or the stabilized "Olympic" telescopic line Capacities from 5 to 52 tons.



"Clean Flow"
Aluminum Bodies

- All-aluminum construction...splice-free 60" or 72" high stakeless sides...extruded outrail and tarp rail cap..."I" beam cross sills
- "Clean Flow" design of the extra deep 30° sidewall corrugations allows complete emptying with no sharp corners for grain to hang up.
- Standard three-section full opening rear doors and swing-out header
- Greater inside dimensions and light weight give you more hauling capacity and let you save fuel while doing it.

"Clean Flow"
Stakeless Steel Bodies



- 52" or 60" heavy gauge sides give you more hauling capacity for grain, sugar beets and other commodities.
- "Clean Flow" design of the extra deep 30° sidewall corrugations allows complete emptying with no sharp corners for grain to hang up
- Greater inside width and length make this an ideal body for hauling bagged or palletized products
- Standard three section full opening rear doors and swing-out header

We've been a part of successful farming and ranching for more than 60 years.

NY cattlemen plan action on buyout

New York Beef Cattlemen's Association vice president Henry Bono of Richmondville and Chester Poplaski of Newark, vice chairman of the state organization's Western Division, attended the National Cattlemen's Association recent board of directors meeting in Washington, D.C. where they pledged the state association's support of the National Cattlemen's Association measures to reverse "the disastrous cattle market decline caused by the government's whole herd dairy buy-out program."

One of the top issues selected by the National Cattlemen's Association for priority attention was action on the dairy whole herd buy-out or Dairy Termination Program. The National Cattlemen's Association has filed a law suit seeking an injunction to halt the marketing of dairy cattle under the buyout program "until an effective orderly marketing plan is implemented." The National Cattlemen's Association will continue to monitor the buy-out program and will take whatever action is necessary to protect the beef cattle industry," Bono said.

The New York delegates attended the House Livestock, Dairy and Poultry Subcommittee hearing. They heard National Cattlemen's Association president Don Butler call on the Department of Agriculture for a reduction of the overload of dairy cattle in Period I of the buy-out program; orderly spacing of dairy cattle within each disposal period; acceleration of export credits on all classes of program cattle; and to begin buying and removing beef in all forms from the market under meat purchase provisions with purchases coinciding with additional dairy cattle slaughter.

Bono noted cattle losses could mount even higher in coming weeks unless precisely scheduled markets are ordered by the Department of Agriculture.

Cattlemen were also told that a dairy quota system is being suggested if and when the dairy buy-out program ends. They also discussed the impact of large scale dairy operations in Georgia by an Irish corporation which is to be given tax free development bonds. These issues, Bono said, are added reasons for beef cattle producers to be aware of the impact of diary programs not only on market prices but on land values and other phases of operation. He is asking for producer input on such issues to be brought to the National Cattlemen's Association at its next meeting as well as to be brought to the state organization's Council.

Bono and Poplaski met with Senator Alfonse D'Amato and with Congressmen Frank Eckerd, Frank Horton, Samuel Strattion, Jerry Solomon, and George Wortley. They discussed the current effects of the dairy buy-out program on the beef cattle industry, the Gramm Redman bill, foreign trade, the federal budget deficit and other issues.

Bono said, "the many speakers and meetings enforced the comment of one of our speakers who said, now is the time for cattlemen to play hard ball."

Farm Talk

By

Jerry Webb

A successful full-time farming operation needs to gross $200,000 a year. That's not my idea. It's one that's being discussed in economic circles and it's a concept that "Successful Farming" magazine feels is worthy of consideration. In fact, the magazine has invited its readers to comment.

A story in the May issue of Successful Farming illustrates the $200,000 concept and why it's important to today's farmers. The article sites Tom and Jane Page and Jim and Susan Johannsen, two South Dakota farm couples who are in the business full time and are trying to make it go. The Page's are about half-way to their goal. The Johannsen's just a little shy.

The Successful Farming story also quotes Lloyd Ferguson, an Oaklahoma financial consultant, who also believes that $200,000 is a minimum gross sales target for full-time farmers. He talks about a gross profit on revenue or GPR. That's the farm's total cash revenue, minus total cash farm expenses including interest expenses but excluding depreciation and income taxes. That figure is then divided by total revenue to yield a GPR percentage.

If a farmer comes up with a 10 percent GPR on sales of $200,000 — that means he has 20,000 left to pay living expenses and taxes, to repay principle on any debt and to replace machinery or other capital items. Obviously, a 10 percent GPR is not very good. With even minimal taxes and subsistence cost of living, the farm couple has little or nothing left to repay debt and replace machinery.

That's where a lot of farmers are in trouble these days. Whether they know it or not their gross profit on revenue is even less than 10 percent. They may be selling $100,000 worth of produce with expenses of $90,000. That's not enough total revenue and the GPR percentage is not enough. So there is nothing left for family living or debt retirement. In fact what happens in so many cases is that operational expenses are left unpaid just so the family can be fed and cared for. Only those bills that are absolutely essential are dealt with because there just isn't enough money.

Ferguson and some other experts feel that a $200,000 gross at least offers the opportunity for a full-time farm income. And Ferguson thinks a 20 percent GPR is much more comfortable on the $200,000 revenue. That would mean $40,000 of positive cash flow before taxes. With a $5,000 tax burden and much more acceptable $20,000 living expense that would still leave $15,000 for debt repayment and replacement of capital equipment. Ferguson says even $15,000 is a minimal figure. One bad year and you are in serious trouble.

The $200,000 gross revenue figure is not a magic solution. Plenty of farmers have grossed that and more and have still gone broke. And no doubt there are farmers living comfortably on much less than that. Obviously a 40 percent GPR on a $100,000 gross would yield that same $40,000. But that may not be realistic with most farm enterprises. In fact, the national average is only 5½ percent according to Successful Farming.

Many farmers are finding ways to improve their GPR whether they call it that or not. They are cutting expenses and locking in more favorable prices. They are boosting yields and eliminating unnessary frills.

The Pages started farming at the worst possible time — 1979. They don't own any land, preferring to keep their modest resources invested in something that pays better. They don't even own their home. They rent 600 acres of cropland and 500 acres of pasture and hay ground and feel they can rent for less than the interest costs alone if they were buying that same ground. In addition to crops, their gross income includes sales of the yearlings from a 75-cow beef herd and feeder pigs and finished hogs from 35 sows. The Pages plan to rent a few more acres of cropland and add some more sows. Eventually, they hope to buy some land for a home base.

The Johannsen's started in 1973. They now own 400 acres and rent another 1,500. They grow wheat, oats, corn and barley and feed out about 150 head of beef cattle each year. Their future expansion includes a farrow to finish operation selling 700 hogs a year.

Both of these couples think a $200,000 revenue goal is realistic in today's agriculture. That figure won't guarantee a comfortable living or debt-free existence but it does offer a shot at success.

It's a concept that's going to be drawing some attention in the months ahead.

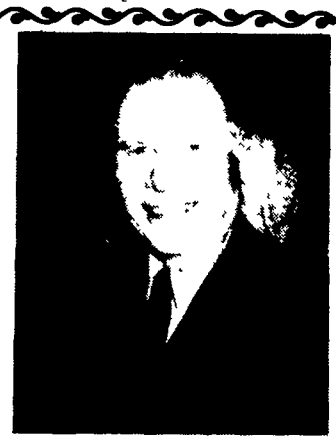
Foraging Around



By Dr. John E. Baylor
Director of Market Development
Beachley-Hardy Seed Company

It's May! Mowers, hay conditioners and forage harvestors are all tuned up. And alfalfa growers throughout the region are geared up to move in for that first big harvest of '86.

We all know that timing of that first harvest is very important. But yield and nutritive quality are, of course, very much a function of when you harvest. But when you make that first cutting, and how you handle it, also pretty much determines the total number of harvests you'll make this year. And it may influence the recovery of any stands uhat have been damaged during winter.

In this week's column I'd like to take a look with you at some of the things we know about how alfalfa grows and develops – and how this growth and development are affected by your cutting management this spring.

To Begin

At this point let's assume you are already growing an adapted variety or varieties such as WL 316 or WL 320 with multiple pest resistance, i.e. moderate to high resistance to the major diseases attacking alfalfa in your area. Let's also assume you're maintaining a sound fertility program for alfalfa – pH 6.7 or above – and adequate levels or phosphate, potash and the other essential nutrients. And, finally, let's assume you have or are prepared to handle any insect and weed pressures that may be present in your area. Removing these stresses does, of course, make intensive cutting management, four or more cuts per year, more realistic without fear of losing your stand. So don't ignore these key management principles!

Where Growth Originates

As you check your alfalfa fields this month you'll note that most of the spring growth comes from crown buds that were formed last fall. Some of those crown buds did, however, develop early this spring before initiation of any new growth. Obviously, then, the ability of these plants to produce a big first cutting this year starts with the health of the plants last fall, and the number of buds formed at that time. A sound management program last fall, adequate levels of fertility and plenty of food reserves in the roots are all factors leading to healthy plants.

About Alfalfa Leaves

Now let's turn our attention to alfalfa leaves. Leaves, of course, are vital to the growth and quality of the crop. They have higher concentrations of crude protein, total digestible nutrients, fat, ash, total nonstructural carbohydrates and minerals than stems. And the digestibility and crude protein concentration of leaves decline more slowly with increased maturity than that of stems. Why? Because as the plants mature the fiber constituents of the stem increase rapidly, experts tell us.

Leaves make up a greater portion of the total yield for early cut alfalfa. For example, the leaf-to-stem ratio of healthy alfalfa at early flowering is about 50-50. By late bloom only 40 percent of the total yield is leaves. This is especially true for first cutting.

Leaf loss, therefore, along with maturity, has a major effect on quality. And after early flowering, loss of lower leaves can occur rapidly as a result of shading, aging and leaf diseases.

What About Cutting Height?

Normally for alfalfa we haven't worried too much about cutting height as long as crown buds are not damaged. And, of course, you normally get higher total yields with short stubble if the plants are healthy.

But we also know that cutting height can influence yield and survival of alfalfa where root reserves are low due to frequent cutting. Leaving a tall stubble permits a greater leaf area that provides additional energy for the initial growth after cutting. Furthermore, with frequent cuttings, where fewer crown buds exist, a taller stubble provides more sites for axillary bud development.

All in all if your stand is healthy, except for the last cut this fall, a cutting height of about 2 inches should be okay. But if your stand is weak for any reason, raising the cutter bar another inch or two could be beneficial.

Putting It Together

So far we've taken a brief look at the alfalfa plant itself. Now let's sum up in terms of managing your first cutting this year.

As indicated previously, crown buds are the origin of growth for the first crop this year. Regrowth, however, occurs from either crown buds or axillary buds on stems. If your first harvest is delayed, new growth will occur from these crown buds. And because of the frequent association between crown bud development, alfalfa maturity, and root reserves, some growers have suggested that shoot elongation is a good indicator that the crop is ready to cut. And it may be helpful. But in this area where winter-dormant varieties are grown, crown bud development is not better indicator than stage of growth, and probably not as good. Why? Because while it's true that certain weather conditions may affect floral bud development these same factors also influence new shoot elongation.

Thus, everything considered, stage of growth is still your best guide to know when to cut. And for first harvest of established stands, the best time to cut is when the majority of the plants reach full bud or are just showing a sprinkle of flowers.

And, since getting that first cutting off and into storage fast and at the peak of quality is so important in terms of your later harvests, it's good to have your strategy planned for handling that first crop. During the past several years top growers in the Pennsylvania Alfalfa Growers Program solved that problem by storing the first cutting as wilted or low moisture hay crop silage.

Agricultural exports in fiscal year 1984 came to $38 billion; agricultural imports were half that amount. The $19 billion favorable balance of trade offset some of the large unfavorable balance in U.S. industrial trade.

Robot-like food tasters are helping food processors maintain the quality of packaged products containing beef, pork, poultry, fish, milk, fruit, nuts, vegetables, oils, syrups, gravies, and other foods. Researchers developed a technique for trapping and testing flavor volatiles, easily evaporated organic compounds, on the production line. That means processors could replace substandard ingredients during processing instead of waiting to test the end product, thus reducing waste. Similar methods are being developed to track the browning of sugars and amino acids that occur during baking, meatpacking, and the processing of cereals and candies.

Tree Evaluation Seminar Set May 28 In N.J.

Trees and other landscape plants enhance property values and increase city assets. There is a growing interest among arborists, shade tree commissioners and landscape managers regarding the methods of plant evaluation.

An all day program designed to inform tree care professionals how to determine the value of trees will be held on May 28, 1986 at Cook College, Rutgers University. The seminar will include morning classroom lectures and an outdoor afternoon field session to provide a hands-on opportunity for participants to evaluate a variety of trees. The program is being sponsored by the New Jersey Chapter, International Society or Arboriculture, in cooperation with the Cooperative Extension Service of Rutgers.

The seminar is open to anyone engaged in the field of arboriculture. Registration for New Jersey ISA Chapter members is $30. All others will be charged $40. The fee includes a buffet luncheon, morning coffee and refreshment breaks, and a copy of the Guide for Establishing Values of Trees and Other Plants, an ISA publication. Proceeds from the seminar will be given to the ISA Research Trust Fund to help finance research projects in arboriculture.

Brochures and registration forms are available from David C. Shaw, Monmouth County Shade Tree Commission, P.O. Box 1235, Freehold, NJ 07728 (201) 431-7903. Participants must be pre-registered no later than May 16.

Mushrooms can now be explosion-puff dried by a government-patented process, stored for over a year, then restored with high flavor and texture for cooking. The process has the potential of expanding mushroom exports and U.S. sales. Conventional drying methods that can leave mushrooms too chewy, and with off-flavors, have been unacceptable to the U.S. mushroom industry. The puff dried mushroom is also an appealing snack or crouton — light, crunchy with concentrated flavor.

Sour rot — the most pernicious destroyer of tomatoes after ripening — can be controlled by a chemical known to check sour rot in citrus. Sour rot is caused by Geotrichum candidum, a pathogen that also attacks harvested carrots, cucumbers, and peaches and makes they decay. Dipping tomatoes in the experimental fungicide guazatine takes only 20 to 30 seconds, yet cuts the incidence of sour rot to about 5% compared to 50% in untreated tomatoes. Fungicide treatment would benefit growers, shippers, and retailers as well as consumers of fruits and vegetables.

THE BALE CHOPPER IS THE GOOSSEN SOLUTION FOR LANDSCAPE, NURSERY AND BERRY MULCHING

Nursery
The Bale Chopper chops then blows straw around trees, bushes, on bedding areas or any place where you need mulch. Apply mulch with the 30' flexible hose; hand held as shown at right.

Residential & Commercial Landscaping
The Bale Chopper evenly applies straw over large areas, and is easy to use around trees, behind bushes, or in any hard to reach spot. And it takes the Bale Chopper less than a minute to thoroughly shred and distribute an entire bale, so even large mulching jobs are completed quickly.

Berry Farming
The Bale Chopper is ideal for mulching strawberries or any row crop.

Rollback ROPS/FOPS

The entire ROPS/FOPS structure rolls back and out of the way and locks in up position for full and easy access to drive and hydraulic components. This structure is spring counter-balanced for easy, one-man rollback. The wiring harness stays intact for better serviceability.

Once the ROPS/FOPS is rolled back the engine and driveline are fully accessible for service. No crowding or extraneous plumbing; just well laid-out. Designed with the service technician in mind.

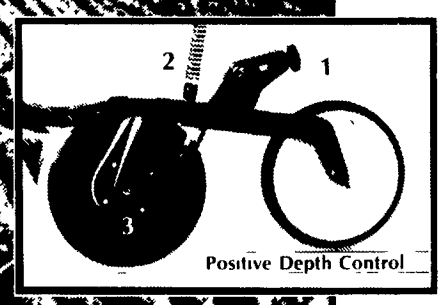
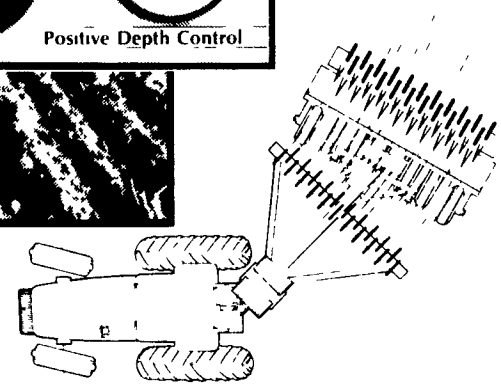
You Won't Find A Better No-Till Drill Than GREAT PLAINS



Great Plains Solid Stand drills have the planting accuracy drilled soybeans need; (1) Depth-Gauging Press Wheels keep the opener from penetrating too deep; planting depth can be quickly changed with exclusive dial-a-depth adjustment system. (2) Double Down-Pressure Springs hold opener firmly in the soil — preventing the bouncing action which leaves seed scattered on top of the ground.

(3) Special Seed Chute places seed in the very bottom of the v-slot, rather than allowing slot to partially close prior to seed release.

SPECIAL PRICE On 12 Ft. Rental Drill



THE NO-TILL HITCH THAT WORKS

Here's why:
A unique pivot between the coulter unit and the drill allows each disk opener to track exactly in the slot cut by the coulter in front — even while the unit is rounding a curve.

Excellent penetration is also achieved, thanks to a heavy-duty framework, calcium-fillable transport tires, and a special weight transfer design which applies some of the weight of the drill itself to the coulters. Should additional weight be needed, specially designed weight brackets are available which accept most tractor suitcase-style weights. In all, up to 400 lbs. of weight per coulter is possible — ensuring penetration even in the toughest ground.

Finally, all Combination Drill Hitches feature a quick hitch for attaching easily to 3-point drills. So you have the flexibility to no-till some acreage, then switch back to a conventional seeding method as conditions vary.

S & S SILO SERVICE

ATTENTION FARMERS
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

S & S Silo Service Has Experience
Over 160 Silos Have Been Relined With Shotcrete

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

Pinkeye vaccinations become springtime ritual

LANCASTER — Like other Pennsylvania dairymen, Charles Hess is anxious to get his heifers out on pasture this spring.

But before he mends one fence or even thinks about opening the barn door, he'll call his veterinarian and ask a very basic question: "Dr. Graybill, what about those pinkeye shots?"

Vaccinating his young stock against pinkeye has become a springtime ritual for Hess, who remembers all too well what an outbreak of the disease did to his heifers a few summers ago.

"The pinkeye was so bad in the summer of 1983, we didn't even mark down all the cases," he says. Nearly one third of his 50 replacement heifers contracted the disease that year, costing him untold hours of extra labor, not to mention the dollars spent on treatment costs.

"Nearly every day that summer," he remembers, "I was spending an hour or so every morning rounding up the heifers in the meadow so we could treat them. We used the eye drops and gave some of them shots, but sometimes we didn't catch them in time."

Hess and his veterinarian, Dr. Robert Graybill, of Lancaster, did their best to control the disease, but some of the young stock were left with scarring on their eyes, and one cow in the herd even went blind. The last straw for Hess was when one of eight heifers to be exported by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association was rejected because she had a spot on her eye.

"I told my veterinarian that when that pinkeye vaccine becomes available, we want it," says Hess.

In the spring of 1984, the Pequea dairy farmer got his wish. Dr. Graybill injected about 30 heifers from six months to two years of age with the Piliguard Pinkeye vaccine. One shot in early April and a follow-up dose about four weeks later protected the young stock through the year. Not one case of pinkeye surfaced in the herd, even during the hot days of August when the disease usually reaches its peak.

In 1985 only the youngest heifers needed two protective shots. Older animals that had received the vaccine the previous year needed only one shot to maintain their immunity to the disease. Again, pinkeye was absent from the herd throughout the summer.

"It's really surprising how well the vaccine covered for them," remarks Graybill about Hess' success with the vaccine. "Once you get pinkeye on the farm, it's almost unstoppable."

Pinkeye is caused by the Moraxella bovis bacteria, which adheres to the surface of the eye and causes infection. Once one heifer in a pasture contracts the disease, others are likely to follow because face flies carry the M. bovis organism from one animal to another.

Pinkeye peaks in mid- to late summer, when heifers and cows on pasture are most susceptible to infection. During the hot, dry days of August, the bright sun and airborne dirt and pollen irritate the animals' eyes, predisposing them to invasion by the bacteria.

"Pinkeye starts with squinting and tearing," says Dr. Larry Hutchinson, Penn State extension veterinarian. "Then the next step is a reddening or inflammation around the cornea. When the eye gets whitish and opaque instead of clear, the animal's vision is severely affected."

The disease progresses rapidly through these steps in just a matter of days, adds Graybill. "In a lot of dairy operations, the heifers are out in the back pasture and aren't routinely observed. If pinkeye gets a start, and the heifers aren't looked at every day, one small case can really be advanced by the next day."

Left untreated, an infected cornea may rupture, resulting in blindness. Hutchinson notes that the animal may then have to be culled out of the herd at a considerable economic loss.

Even if replacement heifers don't actually go blind from the disease, the associated costs do mount up. Charles Hess figures his greatest loss to pinkeye was the hours it took to round up and treat the sick heifers. Other measurable losses include the decreased growth rate of infected animals and the expense of treatment.

"I'd estimate the treatment cost at $10 per head, plus the farmer's labor. And then you can add on $15 if I have to be called in to treat severe cases," says Graybill. "And you know that's an extremely busy time of year for the farmer, so having to take time out of the day to treat pinkeye is a real hardship for him."

Hutchinson emphasizes pinkeye's effect on growth. "A heifer can easily lose 50 pounds or more if she can't get around and doesn't eat or drink over a couple of days," he notes. "If young stock are pastured and if the farmer has had problems with pinkeye in the past, I recommend that he strongly consider using a vaccine in the spring."

Lancaster County extension agent Glenn Shirk agrees. "It's hard to quantify the losses caused by pinkeye, but my gut feeling is that vaccinating would probably pay back some dividends. In these times of tight economics, farmers can't afford to let pinkeye go unchecked in their herds."

Dr. Hutchinson also points out that pinkeye treatments, such as the ointments, drops, patches and others, may help cure existing infections, but aren't entirely satisfactory because they're all "after the fact," besides being very labor intensive.

Piliguard Pinkeye is highly effective against the M. bovis bacteria because it is a piliated vaccine, notes Dr. Harlan Bigbee of Schering Animal Health. Pili are long, thin, rod-shaped proteins that extend from the bacterial surfaces and attach to the eye tissue. The vaccine, Bigbee explains, contains pili antigens that stop attachment and thereby prevent disease.

In addition to vaccinating in the spring, cautious farmers can take extra measures to relieve some of the summer stresses on pasture cattle, suggest the extension personnel. Keeping pastures trimmed, providing shade for the cattle, and controlling flies will help keep livestock healthy.

Livestock auctions to discontinue handling certified calves

Livestock auctions represented at a Pennsylvania Livestock Auction Association meeting April 23 voted unanimously to discontinue handling certified calves beginning May 10, 1986.

The association believes the effort to reduce sulfa residue needs a new direction at this time and has pledged to cooperate with all interested parties — producers, packers and government officials — to work toward eliminating these residues.

"Because the marketing sector's livelihood depends on the free and uninterrupted movement of livestock, our members are extremely concerned about this problem, association president Jim DeGaetano said.

"That is why our members agreed to take part in the voluntary certification program, despite the paperwork burden it imposed on them.

"But," he pointed out, "the voluntary system was based on two important elements: that it would educate producers about the residue problem, and provide a way for the regulatory officials to find those producers who repeatedly violate animal drug usage laws.

"However, after over a year, the educational value of requiring producers to sign certification statements had diminished and since there have been so few cases prosecuted for misuse of drugs that it does not justify auctions continuting to put up with a paperwork nightmare," DeGaetano said.

"While we are discontinuing our participation in the voluntary program for these reasons, I want to stress the interest and concern of the Pennsylvania Livestock Auction Association in finding a solution to this problem, but it serves no one to continue a program that is failing to accomplish its initial objectives," he said.

USDA to survey crop acreage, livestock numbers

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Reporting Service announced today that Pennsylvania crop and livestock producers will be asked to participate in a nationwide survey during late May and early June. Information obtained in this survey will be used to develop estimates of 1986 crop acreages and mid-year livestock numbers. All individual information is confidential and used only in developing official national states estimates.

State statistician Wallace C. Evans noted that concerns about cost of production and returns from farming continue to weigh heavily on producer plans this year. Production and market uncertainties highlight the need for acreage and livestock information producers can rely upon, according to Evans. Farmer cooperation on the survey is the key to developing accurate estimates, he added.

Representatives from the Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Service staff will interview a cross section of farmers, and questionnaires will be mailed to others to gather data for these estimates. National and some Pennsylvania estimates will be published by USDA's Crop Reporting Board. A report on 1986 crop acreages will be available on July 11, including estimates of yield and production for several major crops. Estimates of hog and pig numbers will be released on June 23, and cattle numbers on July 25.

Being Average Is Not Enough

In 1984 the sale of cattle and calves accounted for 10.4 percent of Pennsylvania's Agriculture income. This was exceeded only by milk and all poultry. The problem is that for many producers there were no profits. This is true of many ag commodities. Probably only the top 25 to 35 percent of the producers made money if Pennsylvania producers are similar to those in an Iowa farm records study.

RETURN PER CWT. OF CATTLE SOLD FOR LOW ⅓ AND HIGH ⅓ OF OPERATORS IN NORTHWEST IOWA FEEDLOT RECORDS PROGRAM

1977	$-1.16	$ 2 94
1978	4.08	10 39
1979	-0 31	8 74
1980	-9.79	-3 15
1981	-9 57	-2 06
1982	-4 78	4.80
1983	-8.09	0 58
1984	-5 96	5 76
Average	-4.45	+3.50

The data in the above Table shows that the low return operators lost money seven of the eight years reported while the top third of the operators made money in six of the eight years. Looking at the figures another way, if the average steer sold weighed 1,150 pounds the low-return operators lost an average of $51.17 per head while the high return feeders made an average return of $40.25 per head. Just what separates the low return from the high return feeders?

Closer examination of data shows that high return operators put on gain for less money with less feed required per pound of gain, have faster rates of gain, less death loss and, as a major factor, have greater purchase-sale price margins. It really breaks down to reveal that profitable feeders were better businessmen and paid more attention to the details of management.

Maybe before you decide to feed that next group of cattle you need to evaluate your management abilities. Do you have a history of being a profitable feeder, an average feeder, or usually show a loss. Next, decide if you can improve management or if it isn't worth the effort. Nobody is going to guarantee you a profit, you have to work for it.

A check list to consider would include but not necessarily be limited to:

1. Do you budget out the prospects for profit before each group of cattle?
2. Do you know what your cost are with current price conditions?
3. Do you have other alternatives for your feed resources?
4. Can you stand a major loss if the market moves against you?
5. Do you use available technology and know if it is cost effective under your situation?

Most will not be able to answer all these questions to their satisfaction, but if I can stimulate you to try to evaluate your situation, this column will have been worth the effort.

Selecting a lamb for the backyard

Soon my telephone will be ringing with calls from several folks looking for a place to buy a lamb to raise during the summer. Most of these inquiries are from people with little or no experience in sheep raising, but their interest always seems to catch my attention. Many of these new-to-be shepherds are interested in raising one or two lambs in the backyard for a variety of reasons.

Some what them to help keep the grass clipped down in hard to mow areas, while others value them as weed control specialists. Some folks would like to have a couple of lambs around to watch them play and frolic in the backyard. The more enterprising individuals are interested in growing a nice fleece to spin and weave during the winter months or would like to put a few meat cuts in the freezer for a delicious lamb dinner in the fall.

Whatever the reason may be, it still seems like everyone wants to buy a baby lamb, as young as possible, so they can bottle feed it and watch it grow! I urge most people to buy lambs that have been properly weaned and cared for by the seller. Usually, I suggest that a person obtain a pair of lambs, as opposed to one, as they will eat and grow better. Lambs should have shelter and a nutritious grass area properly fenced to keep predators out and the sheep in.

Fresh water and minerals are important to growing lambs and supplemental feed may be needed if pasture becomes short. A good way to manage the grass area is to divide it into lots and rotate the grazing activity, because sheep graze close to the ground. Because of the close grazing habits, sheep should be wormed to prevent unthriftiness.

Producers selling backyard lambs, should take time to explain simple sheep husbandry practices to new owners so that the experience will be an enjoyable one.

For those desiring general sheep information, keep in mind Monday, May 19, at 7:30 p.m. for a meeting at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center on "Everything You Wanted To Know About Sheep...But Were Afraid To Ask!" This will be a question and answer session with a panel of four experienced, local sheep producers, on subjects pertaining to any phase of the sheep industry. Your attendance is very welcome. For more information on raising lambs, you may call the Penn State Extension Service.

Top of the Class lamb sale draws buyers from four states

MANHEIM – Buyers from several states and many Pennsylvania counties competed at the "Top of the Class" Club Lamb Sale held at the Manheim Community Fair Grounds, April 26.

Sixty-six market lambs sold for an average of $113 and six ewes averaged $240 each. The top-selling lamb brought $240 with several more ranging in price from $130 to $160.

Top of the Class Club Lambs went to New Jersey, Connecticut, Ohio, and Indiana as well as Beaver, Susquehanna, York, Berks, Lehigh, Montgomery, Adams, Cumberland, Wayne and Lancaster counties.

Interest was high and the lambs sold briskly.

B & B Livestock of Danville, Ohio put together the consignment of Hampshire, Suffolk, and Hamp Suffolk cross lambs. Guest consignors included Turtle Mead and Nix Besser Farms' Dorset lamb offerings.

Christian Herr served as sale manager and the newest facility at the Manheim Community Fair Grounds provided an excellent location for the sale.

PRV Task Force sets meeting

LANCASTER – Because of new outbreaks of swine pseudorabies in northern Lancaster County, the Pennsylvania PRV Task Force has called a meeting of all interested persons for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, May 6, in the Ag classroom of the Ephrata Senior High School.

The meeting will focus on reviewing PRV programs and policies, clearing up confustions, and coordinating efforts in understanding and dealing with the current pseudorabies outbreak. Representatives from the local PRV Task Force, Penn State Extension, and the Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry will be available to answer questions and hear concerns.

It is important that swine producers continue to practice strict sanitation on farms and to allow no visitors in swine facilities. Some hog farmers in the Ephrata area may be contact ed by the state Bureau of Animal Industry for surveillance blood sampling as part of a perimeter testing program in the quarantined area. This testing is an effort to trace the origin of the infection and to contain the virus to prevent further spread.

Please make an effort to be present at this special PRV meeting. We need your input to strengthen the efforts of the Pennsylvania PRV Task Force.

Rutgers professor to implement corn research

ATLANTA, Ga. — Dr. Roy Flannery, professor of soils and crops, Rutgers University, achieved six-year average yields of 306 bushels per acre of corn and 103 bushels per acre of soybeans in maximum yield research plots. Now, he is moving into a new phase of work, a program to implement production practices in field-scale demonstrations for maximum economic yield systems.

A grant of $45,000 from the Foundation of Agronomic Research will help support the work over three years.

"We're enthusiastic about moving to this new effort with corn and soybeans to help producers lower their unit production costs," said Dr. W.K. Griffith, of Great Falls, Va. He is Eastern director of the Potash & Phosphate Institute. FAR is a non-profit organization affiliated with PPI to encourage agronomic research and education programs. FAR now supports about 70 projects in the United States, Canada, and other countries.

The field-scale demonstration plots will be on farms in New Jersey, with the following objectives:

• To demonstrate the feasibility of intensively managed corn and soybeans on a field-scale with yield goals of 250 bu/A corn and 80 bu/A soybeans;

• To evaluate the yields and economic returns of the intensive system compared to current recommended practices;

• To inform corn and soybean producers in the state regarding the benefits of MEY production, based on results of the demonstrations.

From his experience with maximum yield research, Dr. Flannery has some definite ideas on certain management decisions in the field-scale plots. For example, an ample and balanced fertilizer program will be maintained through monitoring and multiple applications. Recommended chemicals plus close observation throughout the growing season will be used to control yield-limiting pests such as weeds, insects and diseases. A Heath Precision Planter will be used in order to achieve narrow row widths and precision seed spacing within rows for both corn and soybeans.

In their search for aflatoxin-resistant corn, scientists have found an unlikely ally — the maize weevil. This pest, which attacks field corn and stored grain, is being used experimentally to spread the aflatoxin-producing fungus Aspergillus flavus in test corn. In corn being tested for resistance, the weevil did a better job of spreading the fungus than currently used methods of infection. As a result, scientists can better control contamination so as to more accurately tell which types of corn are more resistant to aflatoxin.

A sobriety test for "drunk" peanuts has been developed by ARS scientists. When peanuts are subjected to extreme hot or cold temperatures before they are cured, they produce alcohol and related compounds that cause a bitter taste. Taste tests have been relied on up to now to detect this, but now agency researchers have found a quicker, more effective way. Peanuts are ground up in a blender, a sensor detects the alcohol vapor from the peanuts, and a special meter measures it — much like a breath test for drunk drivers. The method is being field-tested in three of the top peanut-producing states — Georgia, Texas, and North Carolina — and the results are promising.

Tye offers new CRP grass drills

LOCKNEY, Texas — The Tye Company is introducing their new Series Five 20 foot Grass Drill just in time for the Conservation Reserve Program.

The new Tye Grass Drill incorporates all the improvements of Tye's new Series Five Drills with the ability to accurately plant the small, dense grass seeds as well as the light, fluffy, hard-to-plant grass seeds.

Tye CRP Grass Drills are equipped with three standard seed boxes: a Small Grain Box for large granular seed and cover crops, a Legume Box for small, dense seed and innoculants, and a Bluestem Box for light, fluffy seed and native grass mixes.

The Tye Grass Drill precisely meters three different seeds uniformly, each at different seeding rates, all at the same time. Only the Typ CRP delivers each seed variety by a separate seed delivery tube into the row unit.

A special design Tye Row Unit utilizes a narrow angle double disc opener with controlled seed placement, 2x13 depth control press wheels, depth bands, and heavy-duty down pressure springs to accurately place seed mixes at predetermined seedbed depths. Eight-inch, 10-in row spacings are available.

The depth bands on both sides of the double disc opener and the depth control press wheels provide accurate seeding depth control, which is critical in establishing fragile native grasses. The balance of the CRP Grass Drill comes from field-proven heavy-duty Tye Grain Drills and No-Tills.

Tye's new CRP Grass Drills are now available in four sizes up to 20 feet wide to match enlarged CRP acreage requirements. Only Tye offers Grass Drills for conventional and no-till operations and with features to match local needs — countrywide. The Tye Series Five Grass Drill can also be used for planting wheat and soybeans.

For more information see your Tye Dealer or call A.O. Smith, Customer Service Manager, The Tye Company, P.O. Box 218, Lockney, Texas 79241, (806) 652-3367, TLX 880071.

The new Hog Slat sow feeder offers a one-pin removal system which allows for quick cleaning or easy replacement.

Hog Slat offers versatile sow feeder

NEWTON GROVE, NC — Hog Slat, Inc., a leading hog equipment manufacturer, offers a versatile sow feeder in heavy 16 GA. No. 304 stainless steel with a new one-pin removal system to allow for quick cleaning or replacement. This innovation does away with slow, awkward "nut and bolt" replacement techniques.

Only the finest quality steel and construction techniques are used in Hog Slat's patented stainless steel feeders. The new feeders still have deep troughs and the exclusive feed saver lip to save you money by providing less feed available for waste and by keeping sows at the trough instead of backing off and spilling feed.

Hog Slat's patented feeders are designed by hog producers for hog producers and provide optimum savings in time, feed, and maximum durability under demanding usage. The new one-pin removal feature is a continuation of Hog Slat's on-going efforts to constantly improve hog producer equipment.

For more information on these stainless steel feeders, also available in galvanized steel, call or write: Hog Slat, Inc., Box 308, Newton Grove, NC 28336 (NC 1-800-682-1103 or US 1-800-334-6465).

Atlantic to sample six Pennsylvania bulls

LANCASTER — Six Pennsylvania-bred Holstein bulls are currently in the random sampling program for young sires conducted by Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, according to General Manager Harry Roth. Each bull results from specially-planned matings between well-proven sires and outstanding cows owned by Holstein breeders.

8H2011 Len-Lyn Bova Marks-ET was bred by Galen Crouse of Stevens. He is sired by Rockalli Son Of Bova and his dam is an "Excellent" Conductor daughter, Diamond-S Wapa Classy. She has completed two records to date over 27,000M and 1,000F, and has a USDA cow index of +913M and +48F. Classy's dam is a "Very Good" daughter of the popular Atlantic sire, Pennstate Ivanhoe Star.

Jay and Kirk Hillegass of Berlin are the breeders of 8H2014 Hillmont Bova Patrick-ET. Also a Bova son, Patrick's dam is Hillmont Glendell Pinky — VG at 88 points. The cow has averaged 4.2% fat test in her first three production records and carries an index of +739M and +42F. Her dam is an "Excellent" daughter of Harrisburg Gay Ideal, another well-known Atlantic bull.

8H2017 Swan-Road Delegate Gunfire enters Atlantic's sampling program from J. Harodl Dare's herd at Atglen. The sire of Gunfire is Cass-River Select Delegate and his dam is Swan-Road Pete Glory — VG. Glory averages 4.0% fat test and has a cow index of +625M and +30F. Both grandams in Gunfire's pedigree are also high testing cows.

From Rothrock Golden Holsteins at Kempton comes 8H2024 Rothrock Tradition Leadman. He is a son of Sweet-Haven Tradition and his dam is an "Excellent" young Valiant daughter, Walkup Valiant Lou Ella. At 2-2y, she produced 29,180M and 1,234F in 365 days, and is currently indexed at +1,030M and +51F. Her dam is EX-94 and made several high records.

82H2028 Lyn-Li Impressive, a son of Glendell Arlinda Chief, was bred by Robert & Jean Taylor of Friedens. Impressive's dam is Redroof Lyn-Li Image—VG, with an index of +83M and +27F. At 3-4y, Image produced 25,850M and 963F in 365 days and 4-6y is making over 30,000M and 1,000F. Her VG-88 dam has two records over 30,000M and 1,100F, as well.

The breeder of 8H2036 Knott-Run Loren-ET is John Brubaker, Jr. at Christiana. This young bull is sired by Cor-Vel Enchantment. His dam is Knott-Run Pete Lucy — VG, a cow that has 305-day records of 30,230M and 1,023F at 2-8y and 28,410M with 1,062F at 4-0y. Her index is +784M and +27F.

Manager Roth points out that each young bull is randomly-mated with about 750 cows on DHIA test in members' herds. Three to four years from now, their milking daughters will be evaluated for production and conformation traits. Satisfactory ratings will bring these bulls into the stud's active sire lineup for extensive AI service.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Corn planting is underway in the southern parts of the state and is just around the corner in the central area. Sometimes farmers get in too much of a hurry to get that corn seed into the ground. This hurry often causes lost time, lost dollars, and frustrations. The best advice on corn planting is to follow the book.

1. Get a soil test - you need pH to determine the potential success of the material you use for weed control.

2. Apply lime if it is called for or even if it not called for, if the ground has been in a no-till program for several years. Apply at least a half of a ton per acre. Proper pH is essential if you expect weed control material to work.

3. Calibrate or at least know how your planter is dropping the seeds.

4. Make sure the soil temperature is up to corn planting level.

5. Get the herbicide on at the proper time. Do not plant corn without provisions for weed control. Personally I would prefer getting the herbicide on prior to planting unless I was using a specific post planting material. If I have it on prior to planting, rainy weather does not cause the corn and weeds to sprout before weed control is applied. Weed control is a must if you want a decent crop.

6. Check the planter before planting to make sure that one or more of the tubes is not blocked and that is all chains are loose and working. It would not hurt to check it a few times while planting either. Make sure that all parts are working as they are supposed to. It is frustrating to find at a later time (like once the corn has come up) that one row was not being planted or the seeds were not being properly covered.

Lime is Important

Lime may be the most important ingredient in crop production for farmers in much of Pennsylvania. It furnishes soil nutrients (calcium, magnesium). It also neutralizes soil acids (pH). A near neutral pH is necessary for proper action of many weed control materials. Acid soils result in necessary plant food nutrients being tied up by other elements such as aluminum. Thus you could consider lime as being a fertilizer, a neutralizer, and a soil conditioner.

Beware Gyp Products

Everyone is at one time or another tempted to buy a "gyp" product Farmers are no exception. In fact, farmers may be more subject to such temptations that most other groups, except the elderly. One reason for both groups to be vulnerable is that both are somewhat isolated from the general public. Both groups at times become lonely for human conversation and thus "suckers" for fast talking "pitchmen." Thus it may be simple for a "fast talker" with a new soil conditioner or a magic nutrient producing machine or a miracle fertilizer to con a "sucker" into buying and perhaps even recommending it to someone else.

There are different classes of "gyp" products. There are those that may be considered as outright frauds with practically no value for any purpose. Some may even be harmful. These are often sold by phone or a fast talking person who is a stranger and will be gone as soon as he or she has collected the sale money. There are others with some value that seldom live up to purported claims. These may even establish some local following with a local salesperson. They may not be harmful and may even be beneficial, but cost far more than they return. Then there are the semi legit type products. These have value and could return some secondary benefits but are usually overpriced in relation to those returns and benefits.

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range By raising the pH from a level below 6 0 to 6 5 or higher you can expect to harvest as much as 5 more bushels of corn per acre, with similar increases for all other forage and cash crops

Yorkshire boar tops Brooks End, Par Kay Farms Sale

BEAVERTOWN — The top-selling hog at the Brooks End and Par Kay Farms annual Spring Sale April 18 was a Yorkshire boar that sold for $1,000 to Sam Lane of Dover; N.C.

Sale total for the 177 head was $46,565. Average on 78 head of pure-bred boars and gilts was $386. Average of 48 head of Yorkshires was $410, while 30 head of Landrace averaged $347. Sale average on 99 head of commercial open gilts was $166.

The top-selling Yorkshire bred gilt sold to Lloyd Conrad of Montrose, for $510. The two high-selling Landrace bred gilts each sold for $410, with one purchased by Glenn Jamison of Chambersburg, and the other by Michael Peterson of Frewsburg, N.Y. Jay Anderson of Amsterdam, N.Y. purchased the top-selling Landrace boar for $450.

Dean Baker, Lafayette, Ind., was auctioneer.

Garden Should Be Contoured

Gardens should be planted across the slope, instead of up and down the slope. According to Duane Pysher, District Conservationist with the USDA Soil Conservation Service, at the Agricultural Center in Bern Township, the ideal way for a better garden on a slope is to have the rows on the contour.

When the garden is contoured, Pysher said, water runoff is slowed down because it is stored in the row. Therefore, the soil absorbs more rainwater, has less erosion and is less affected by drought. This pays off in better yields and higher quality vegetables or flowers.

To contour your garden, mark a contour line across the slope. It does not require special skill or equipment to set a contour line. A level can be improvised from materials on hand. An efficient device can be made from an ordinary carpenter's level mounted on a 2x4.

To determine the level line, begin about the center of the slope. Lay the 2x4 along the slope and move one end up and down until the bubble on the level is centered. Mark the spot and repeat the process across the slope to establish your contour guideline. Plant your flowers and/or vegetables parallel to this line.

As you cultivate the garden, leave small furrows or ridges to collect and hold the rainwater so it can soak into the soil.

"This easy practice is one way to improve your garden and protect the natural resources," stated Pysher. "Conservation of natural resources is a responsibility of all of us, whether we live on a farm or in town."

"I believe Silo Guard II is partially responsible for this milk income increase due to the fact we've made no changes in our feeding program other than treating our haylage this past year with Silo Guard II.

I began noticing the untreated haylage was 'carmelizing' along with loosing excessive amounts of water. Treatment of the haylage with Silo Guard II eliminated this problem totally. The fed-out haylage now has a fresh, green appearance with a pleasant aroma. Our herd, 200 of which we're milking respond to the treated haylage very well, eagerly clean it up with no hesitation. I feel that the improved silage diet along with closer attention to milking and feeding programs have made the difference. I'm planning to treat other silages this year with Silo Guard II and strongly recommend it to other dairy farmers . . . it sure makes a profitable difference for me," says Jim.

For complete information on maintaining a higher quality silage and increasing your profits . . . contact one of our Silo Guard II Reps. or call us toll-free.

Cut Costs, Not Corners.

With the Bush Hog Squealer It's a Bush Hog rotary cutter at a smaller price But don't let the price fool you The Squealer's engineered with the same quality features that are making Bush Hog the biggest name in farm implements The gearbox is Bush Hog-designed and Bush Hog-patented The cutter blade tips move faster than other economy cutter's, for more efficient cutting The optional elliptical blade pan on the 36" and 42" wide models and the standard elliptical blade pan on the 48", 60" and 72" wide models are similar in design to the blade pans used on larger Bush Hog cutters (only scaled down a little, to each of the Squealer's five sizes) So while the Squealer may be inexpensive it's no toy It's tough It's efficient Because like all 100 Bush Hog implements, including the 20 new models we've introduced in the last 12 months, it's engineered to cut what needs cutting most in farming these days Costs

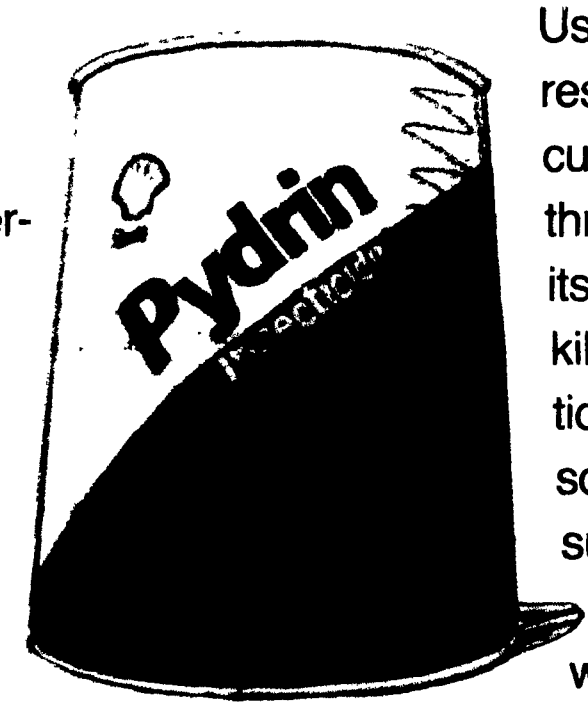
BE DEAD RIGHT ABOUT CUTWORM CONTROL.

With Pydrin as a preventive, cutworms will be dying to get at your corn.

Pydrin® insecticide is a powerful preventive treatment in corn fields where cutworms are an annual problem, like bottomlands, weedy, no-till and late-planted fields. Pydrin can be applied at planting, tank mixed with most corn herbicides for cost saving weed-and-insect control in one pass. Pydrin also controls true armyworms early in the season. And it's more effective than toxaphene. But Pydrin's flexibility doesn't end here.



With Pydrin as a rescue, they'll be dying to get out.

Use Pydrin as a highly effective rescue treatment in areas where cutworms pose an occasional threat. Pydrin's long residual plus its resistance to washoff keeps killing worms long after application. Costs less than expensive soil insecticides which may only suppress cutworms. Saves money because you treat only when insects appear.

Used as a preventive or rescue treatment, Pydrin delivers more effective. more economical control you can count on. Shell stands behind it with a Guaranteed Performance Program. Ask your dealer for details.

"Agexport '86" to Demonstrate US Ag Leadership

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The National Commission on Agricultural Trade and Export Policy today announced plans for a week-long program in the Nation's Capital to demonstrate U.S. agricultural commitment to leadership in world trade.

During the June 16-20 series of top-level conferences and ceremonies, the 35-member independent National Commission will unveil its final recommendations on U.S. trade policy to Congress and President Reagan. The blue-ribbon advisory group was formed by Congress in late 1984 to recommend improvements in the nation's agricultural trade policy. It will complete its assigned task in July, 1986.

The mid-June program in Washington, D.C. will be called "agexport '86," and is already being billed as America's most important agricultural trade event in recent memory. Both U.S. and world business and trade leaders are expected to participate. President Reagan is planning to sign a Congressional Resolution proclaiming June 16-20, 1986 as National Agricultural Export Week.

The National Commission will meet in Washington, D.C. in full session on Friday, April 11, to finalize its policy recommendations. During its all-day meeting at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, it will consider policies on reorganization of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to place added emphasis on international trade; upcoming GATT negotiations; market development programs of other nations; promotion programs of state departments of agriculture; proposals on foreign exchange, subsidies, and Third World debt; and international food aid programs. The important trade policy recommendations of the National Commission have been requested by Congress to help formulate omnibus trade legislation in the 99th U.S. Congress.

Earnings from U.S. agricultural exports have contributed an estimated $333 billion to the nation's balance of payments during the past decade, stimulating over one trillion dollars in national economic activity. But these exports have been declining since 1981, down more than $36 billion in actual sales in the five-year period. Congress acted during its 1984 session to form a National Commission to develop an action plan to restore effective competition on world markets.

The National Commission has called on leaders of the private business community to join with government officials in the united effort to address this critical national problem. During agexport '86, these national leaders will address the National Commission's final policy recommendations in a broad major effort to:

- Improve U.S. agriculture's leadership and competition in trade affairs;
- Respond to unfair competition in world markets;
- Expedite current GATT arbitration and settlement mechanisms;
- Create new demand in international markets;
- Manage macroeconomic influences;
- Improve the U.S. food aid system;
- Define international cooperation in trade matters;
- Improve export enhancement programs.

Delaware Director Honored

Dr. Richard E. Fowler, Delaware Cooperative Extension director, has been named the 1986 Distinguished Alumnus of Pennsylvania State University's program in animal production. He earned his bachelor's degree in animal science from Penn State in 1958. He also holds a Master's degree and doctorate in animal science from the University of Maryland.

Fowler joined the University of Delaware in 1968 as an assistant professor and extension livestock specialist. In this capacity he helped establish the university's swine research unit near Georgetown, as well as an on-farm swine testing program, a progeny test and a boar test.

In 1982, Fowler was appointed assistant director of extension with responsibility for agricultural programs. He became director of the Delaware Cooperative Extension system two years later.

Fowler is no stranger to extension. His father was an agricultural agent in Montour County, Pa. for 30 years. His twin brothers, David and Donald, are both extension agents in Pennsylvania counties. Collectively, the four have served over 100 years in Cooperative Extension.

Bank sponsors Agri-business meeting

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

GILBERTSVILLE — Over 100 farmers gathered at the Gilbertsville Fire Company recently to participate in the annual Agri-Business Farmers Seminar sponsored by the National Bank of Boyertown. The 1986 seminar addressed the issues of diversification, stress management, and farm real estate values.

Pennsylvania agricultural leaders, National Bank of Boyertown officials, and local business associates were on hand to provide information to farmers as Charles Gehris, Vice President, National Bank of Boyertown, performed the introductions. Hoping to provide current information that would be beneficial in today's farming enterprise, the program featured J. Luther Snyder, Deputy Secretary of Agriculture; Michelle Rodgers, extension home economist; Richard Brandt, realtor; and Jack Moulton, director of operations, Farm Management Services.

The Deputy Secretary of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, J. Luther Snyder, began the day-long program with his presentation, "Pennsylvania Agriculture — Our Number One Industry."

"Farming is the third most stressful occupation there is," stated Michelle Rodgers as she continued the program. Rodgers spoke on stress management. More than just long hours and hard work, she went on to say, farming involves "critical timing, critical problem solving, and large sums of money." According to Rodgers, "managing ourselves" is most important to farmers.

"Stress is only negative when it hinders our performance . . . then it harms our body," Rodgers stated. She listed symptoms of stress including headaches, dizziness, a change in appetite, a tightness in the neck and shoulders, heartburn, and muscle aches, and ways to recognize it in yourself.

Rodgers cautioned, "worry is really a waste of time." She told farmers that only about eight percent of any worry could be positive, the rest is wasted because it is usually about a past event or something that cannot be changed.

"Identify farm stress," she continued, "and learn to understand and manage it." She promoted a change in lifestyle or lifestyle management to control stress. She listed some "lifestyle management" practices: talk it out; get away, a five minute break, vacation, etc.; take one step at a time; work off anger — exercise; give in occasionally; go easy with criticism; take it easy; do something for someone else; laugh — a great medicine; and give yourself a pat on the back when you've done a good job.

Rodgers added that the main things that cause stress for farmers are uncontrollable. She advised, "make a change in lifestyles before you reach the crucial point."

Continuing the program was Richard E. Brandt, realtor. He spoke on farm values, appraisal criteria, and sales of farm land.

Richard Brandt

Stating that an appraisal is the "actual value" of the land, Brandt listed factors affecting a selling price. Location, soils, productivity, interest rates, developmental rights, legislation, and foreign buyers, all have an effect on current land values. He predicted the dip in prices to be over but added, "tomorrow could change that very quickly."

Jack Moulton, director of operations, Farm Management Services, concluded the program with his topic, "Diversification, Is this the answer to survival". At the conclusion of his presentation, he listed several survival points for farmers to strive for in their daily operations. They are: keep good records; use an analysis of records; base management decisions on facts; listen to advice; watch excessive lenders of money; and develop a plan to achieve goals.

Patton named to marketing bureau

HARRISBURG — L. Jeffrey Patton has assumed the position of director of a newly created Bureau of Marketing Development in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, according to Secretary Richard E. Grubb.

Patton, 30, of Allentown, was granted a leave of absence as Agricultural Programs Consultant with Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. to play a leading role in a reorganization the Department has initiated.

"His significant experience with agriculture, rural development and marketing is a tremendous asset as we set out to do even more in the vital areas of marketing and development," Grubb said.

Patton has more than seven years experience in agriculture, the last four in a capacity which involved him in working with the agricultural industry to promote economic development in Pennsylvania.

"My career objectives mesh nicely with the Department's goal and ongoing effort to promote the growth of Pennsylvania agriculture," Patton said. "I'm pleased with the opportunity to share that commitment." He assumed the position today.

Under a planned reorganization, Patton will oversee activities now centered in the separate Bureaus of Marketing and Agricultural Development. The functions and staff of those bureaus will be placed in the Bureau of Marketing Development.

"By consolidating two bureaus that share similar goals of stimulating our agricultural economy and communities, we can better coordinate an overall strategy to achieve those ends," Grubb said.

One proposed change would elevate commodities promotional programs to division level status. "This reflects the importance of these programs and administratively will have a positive impact on them," Grubb said.

"The reorganization and Mr. Patton's employment will enhance our abilities to expand already successful marketing and development efforts, and carry out new export initiatives," Grubb said.

Gov. Thornburgh's proposed 1986 budget includes a $300,000 appropriation to help companies and individuals enter the export market.

As an agricultural programs consultant with PP&L, Patton has designed and executed marketing and economic development programs for the state's farm industry.

Before joining PP&L, Patton was employed from 1979-82 as Region 6 organization director for the Pennsylvania Farmers Association. He was responsible for membership, public affairs and information programs in an eight-county area.

He has a Bachelor of Science Degree in general agriculture, 1977, from Pennsylvania State University. He is a participant in the Pennsylvania Rural Leadership Program, Penn State College of Agriculture, and will remain so through 1988.

He was secretary-treasurer to the Pennsylvania Rural Development Committee, 1984-85, and serves on the Pennsylvania Farm Electrification Council to the Agricultural Advisory Council, Penn State College of Agriculture.

Farmers who quit face adjustments

ITHACA, NY — Many farmers are going out of business and, in many cases, they have not planned for life after farming.

A new Cornell University study shows that many farmers had problems in making the transition. Many of the farmers surveyed were unhappy with the non-farming jobs they landed, and they typically had difficulties in assessing their job skills or hunting for a job.

More than half the respondents were critical of the support from community and religious organizations during the transition.

Other highlights of the Cornell survey indicate that although most farmers considered leaving farming for months, the final decision rarely was premeditated; instead, it was impulsive. Some families said that once a decision was made, it took much longer than they expected to complete the exit.

Cornell's survey consisted of interviews with 28 New York State farm families who left farming between 1982 and 1985. The Cornell research team sought to describe just what these families went through during the transition, including their problems, adjustments, and emotional reactions, as a means of helping other farm families facing possible forced exit.

"Because of economic pressures, rising milk production, and reduced government supports, increasing numbers of farm families are forced to leave farming and make a transition to a new life," says Kate Graham, a graduate student who conducted the study under the direction of John Brake, professor of agricultural finance in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

Brake estimates up to 25 percent of the 25,000 family farms in New York State could go out of business within the next two to five years.

Families who participated in the Cornell study had considered quitting farming for an average of 15 months before making the decision. The Cornell researchers were surprised at the long period of time the families took to make the final decision. The final decision, however, was often made while under stress and before they were forced out by lenders. It then took as many as two or more years to actually complete the exit.

In the process of going out of farming, many families felt isolated, rejected, and sometimes even condemned by the lack of support from their community.

"The emotional reaction to the loss of the farm often parallels that of the death of a family member," Graham comments. "The sequence of emotions is denial, confusion, anger, guilt, depression, and recovery."

People either don't know what to say to the farmers or found it difficult to acknowledge that such a crisis could happen to a neighbor, Graham notes. They feared that if they acknowledged the fate of their exiting neighbor, it might happen to them.

The Cornell findings closely parallel those of a similar study involving 42 families in Missouri by University of Missouri researchers. The anxiety levels, difficulties in finding a job, and apparent lack of support from church and community are among similarities found in the two studies, Graham explains.

Although the majority of families claimed that the emotional impact of having to leave the farm was devastating, many said that they were feeling optimistic about the future, sometimes because "things couldn't get any worse."

"Despite the trauma and the loss of their farms, which often included the loss of their home, the farm families felt that 'there is life after farming,'" Graham says.

Many of the families wished that they had received more counseling which might have helped them make the transition more smoothly. For those who are now facing a similar crisis, the families in the survey offer the following advice:

– Don't delay the decision until it's too late. Don't use up all your equity hoping for things to improve.

– Make your own decision to g out; don't wait to be forced o through foreclosure or bankru tcy.

– Get an attorney with the a propriate experience and e pertise. Legal aspects of exitin are complex and specialized.

– Plan for the exit, an especially make plans for life afte the exit.

– Talk to the county Cooperativ Extension staff. People in thi organization can be helpful i listing and discussing alternatives – Talk to others who have gon out.

– Think about your wor alternatives; get help in analyzin your skills and in locating em ployment.

– Accept the situation for what is. While it may be a defeat i farming, it isn't a failure as person or for the future. Gettin out of farming is not the end of th world.

Micronutrients get new attention

NEWARK, DE — Crop response to added micronutrients on Delaware's poorly buffered coastal soils has received renewed attention in recent years. Given the susceptibility of these soils to overliming and the widespread use of manures, scientists at the University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station believed it was important to know how soil pH and micronutrient source affect the distribution and plant availability of three key micronutrients — manganese copper and zinc.

To answer these questions, soil scientist Dr. J. Thomas Sims conducted a greedhouse study last year on four typical Delaware soils — silt loam, black loam, sandy loam and loamy sand. The project was partly funded by a University of Delaware Research Foundation (UDRF) grant.

Sims' findings indicate that the soil types he studied contain abundant micronutrient reserves whose availability to plants is determined primarily by soil pH.

Sims found that soil pH markedly altered the distribution and plant-availability of manganese and zinc. However, it had little effect on copper, which is already tightly bound by the organic part of the soil. He also found that the micronutrients in poultry manure were readily available to plants under normal pH.

New directions given to keep farm borrowers

WASHINGTON — A representative of The Farm Credit Council told congressmen today that the Farm Credit System "is clearly on record that loan restructuring is the preferred alternative for working with troubled borrowers. Foreclosure is the last alternative and the least preferred."

Also in his testimony before a House Agriculture subcommittee, Douglas D. Sims, chief operating officer of the Farm Credit Banks of St. Louis, cited a pricing philosophy resolution recently adopted by Fram Credit leadership that would enable system institutions to bring interest rates to more competitive levels.

"The system must operate with a view to long-term profitability. We're not just preparing ourselves to receive federal financial help. That means we've got to get interest rates back to competitive level," he told the lawmakers.

Sims, who is a member of the Washington-based Farm Credit Council's legislative committee, a trade assocation for the farmer-owned lending system, said, "Contrary to what you often read, the decision to foreclose on a farmer is not a decision easily and quickly made by any of our farmer-board members of any Farm Credit System institution."

He said, "It is on this basis that the Farm Credit System– its banks and associations– are making the commitment to administer troubled loans with the objective of utilizing loan restructuring measures, including participating in federal or state-funded interest rate buy-down programs and FmHA loan guarantees, as preferred alternatives to foreclosure."

Sims said this commitment was one of several important resolutions unanimously adopted recently by the Farm Credit bank presidents and recommended by the system directors to the board of the Farm Credit Corporation of America, the umbrella policy-making body of the Farm Credit System. The FCCA board approved all the resolutions on April 3.

Sims made his remarks in testimony before the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development which held a hearing today on general agricultural credit conditions and on credit-related legislation.

While restructuring of loans is the preferred alternative, decisions to do so must be made on a case-by-case basis, Sims said. Key elements essential for a decision to restructure are:

— The borrower has acted in good faith to manage his business affairs.

— The borrower can present a plan which demonstrates realistic prospects for returning to financial viability.

— The restructuring would minimize losses which must have be borne by other farmer-borrower-stockholders of the bank or association involved.

On the subject of interest rates, Sims told the House subcommittee that Farm Credit leadership adopted a resolution to put into effect a new pricing philosophy to make its interest rates competitive. Currently the system sets rates on its average cost of funds– which includes recently sold securities and bonds sold months or years ago– rather than on the present lower rates. Consequently, Farm Credit interest rates have been running higher than its competitors in many instances.

Sims pointed out to the congressmen that no interest rate changes can be made by a Farm Credit district without approval of the Farm Credit Administration (FCA).

Sims said, "To achieve long-term profitability the Farm Credit System must price products and services to its customers on a locally competitive and differential basis, considering risk and costs incurred on each loan."

He said, "Like any other financial institution, we must be able to competitively serve our best farmer and cooperative borrowers and pursue marketing strategies which will attract new credit-worthy farmers, teachers and cooperatives."

Sims said that because of FCA's recent directive concerning capital sufficiency, "every institution in the system now has questions about the extent to which FmHA programs and other restructurings can be undertaken, or whether any state interest buy-down programs can be used."

Other resolutions approved included one that stated the system would seek quick implementation of the Farm Credit Amendments Act of 1985.

Last year Congress passed the Farm Credit Amendments Act which was designed to provide an improved means for Farm Credit to manage its losses and mobilize its capital, to establish the Farm Credit Administration as an arm's-length regulator, and to put in place a backup mechanism for seeking federal assistance if the system's best efforts to manage its financial problems are unsuccessful.

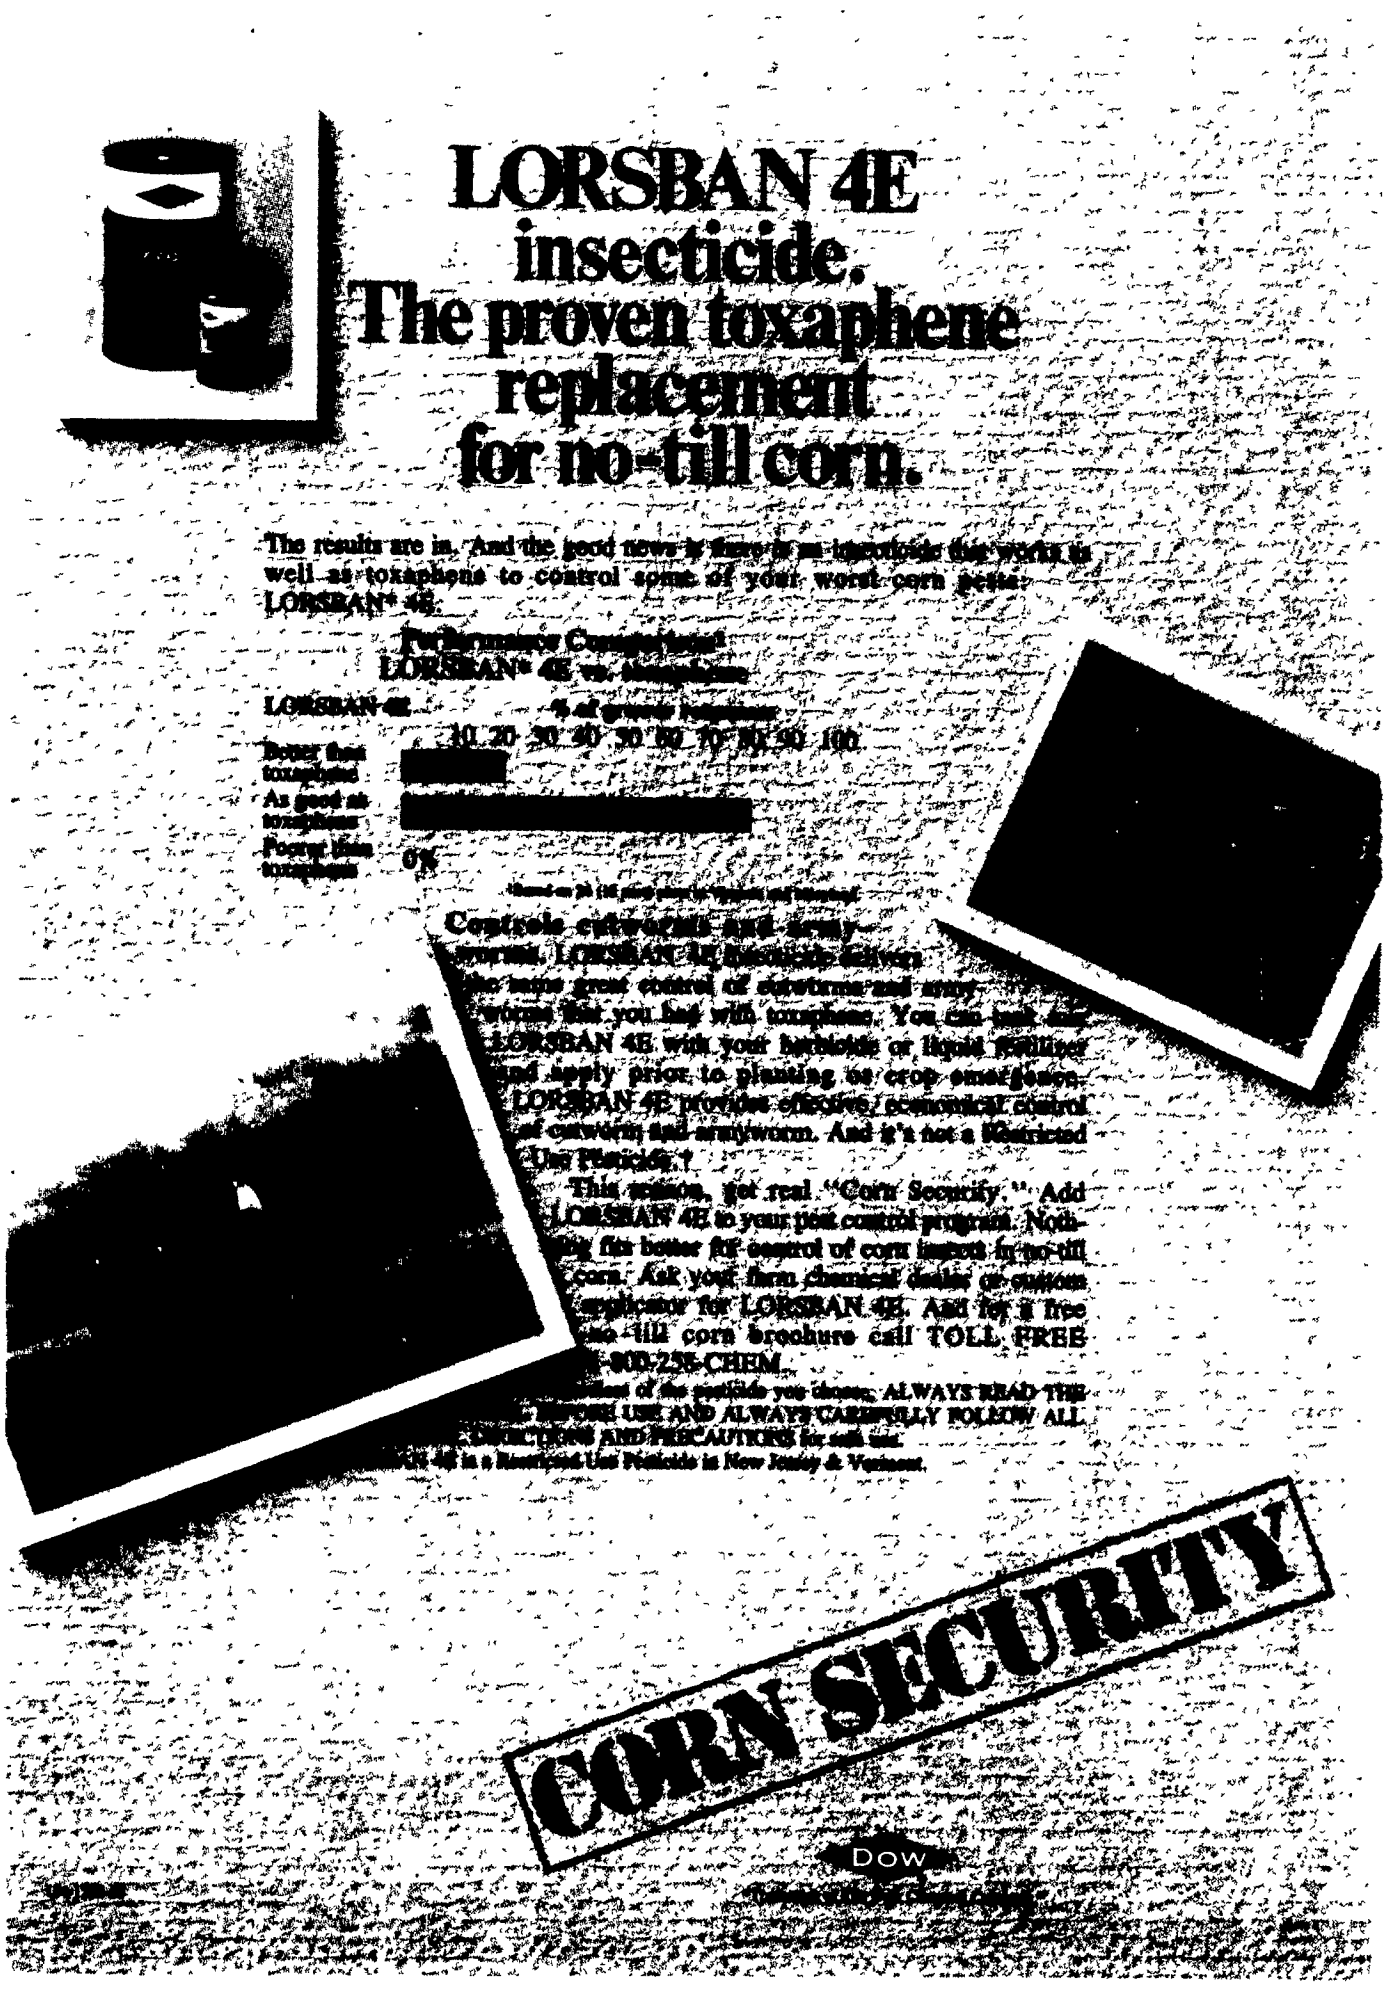
Another resolution calls for development of a business plan to return the system to long-term profitability.

The Farm Credit System, which makes approximately one-third of all the agricultural loans in the country, is owned by its farmers-borrowers, and funds for its loans are raised on Wall Street through the sale of Farm Credit System securities. No federal dollars are involved. In 1985, the combined banks and associations of the Farm Credit System reported a net operating loss of $2.7 billion. This is the largest loss ever reported by a financial institution.

Sims said, "Our 1985 financial results mirrored another devastating economic year suffered by many of our borrower-owners."

The Farm Credit System's officers and directors have a "very strong commitment to operate the system on a businesslike basis but with the expectation that we will deal with compassion toward those who have no reasonable prospect for financial viability," Sims said.

He said that "farmers and their lenders are faced with the most difficult situation that have faced since the Great Depression. The challenge before the system is to work through the most troubled loans, loan by loan, in an attempt to help as many of our farmer/borrowers through this difficult transition as we possibly can while striving to maintain the system as a sound, dependable, and competitively viable provider of credit and related services to U.S. agriculture for the future."



Youth Forestry Camp

CREAMERY — The Montgomery County Soil Conservation District is offering a scholarship to attend a sesson of the Youth Forestry Camp to be held at Stone Valley Engineering Camp in Huntingdon County, July 22 to 25.

Young people, ages 11 to 13, with an interest in learning about forest resources may apply for the scholarship. In order to participate in the program, an applicant must receive a Youth Forestry Camp Scholarship.

The sponsor's scholarship is $80 of the registration fee and the student's tuition is $35. The fee covers meals, lodging, insurance and program materials.

Youth Forestry Camp offers youth an opportunity to learn about forest resources. The purpose of the camp is to serve as an introduction to basic forest management skills, the forest products industry and careers in the field of forest resources.

The camp program consists of four days of classroom and field exercises during which campers are exposed to various aspects of forest management. Instructors are professional foresters volunteering their time and expertise.

For more information and an application for the scholarship, contact Nancy M. Kadwill, Box 20, Route 113, 1015 Bridge Road, Creamery, PA 19430. Phone is 489-4315. Application deadline is May 23.

Two-Tier debt restructure proposed

A new innovative approach for aiding financially troubled farmers was recently introduced by the American Farm Bureau Federation. The plan, called Two-Tier Debt Restructuring, has received favorable support by the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Comptroller of the Currency.

It includes capital forbearance, that is, allowing banks to operate below the six percent of total assets capital requirements if they can replenish capital within five years. Currently, banks desiring to write off portions of farm loans run up against this requirement and discourage loan forbearance.

Two-Tier Debt Restructuring would encourage the farm operator and the lender to sit down and analyze the individual operation to determine how much debt could be paid under normal circumstances. That part of the debt would become Tier One. Under Tier One, the farm operator would pay a portion of the farm debt making a regular interest and principal payment over a 10-year period. The remainder of the debt would be placed in Tier Two where it would carry an interest rate of three percent with no principal payments.

As the portion of Tier One debt is paid off annually, an equal amount of the debt would shift from Tier Two to Tier One until all the Two-Tier debt is paid.

For example: If you have a $300,000 debt, and after a thorough analysis, the bank and borrower decide that $200,000 can be properly serviced; that becomes Tier One. The remaining $100,000 becomes Tier Two debt.

In order to see Two-Tier Debt Restructuring, there will need to be regulatory changes which would allow banks to operate at below the six percent of total assets capital requirement if they can replenish capital within five years. Current law discourages loan forbearance by imposing penalties on banks offering such restructuring. Banks have, as a rule, chosen to write-off bad debts, which there is little chance of collecting. In the farm community these are the ones that end up in foreclosure.

Debt restructuring for troubled farmers has several advantages.

One, it gives the farm bank a realistic chance to recover the principal amount loaned and a reasonable rate of interest on a major portion of the principal.

Secondly, while the bank is receiving a lower interest rate on the second tier for a five year period, the amount of the lower interest loan is diminished each year as a portion of the principal shifts up to the first tier each year. Thus the bank is sustaining a relatively minimal loss in interest compared to a total write-off of the principal loan.

This program is a debt restructuring – not a debt forgiveness program. The farmer will also benefit as he has set his payments at a manageable amount and he is able to pay off his indebtedness, thus preserving his credit and his farm.

The Senate Banking Committee, the Federal Reserve Board, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) and Comptroller of the Currency have agreed to the necessary changes to regulations which would allow for debt restructuring.

Banking experts and economists have admitted that debt restructuring is not for everybody. It is obvious that some farmers now have debt loads that make it impossible for principal and interest to be paid from the income of their operations under normal conditions. Partial or total liquidation may be the only resource.

Again, it is important to stress that in order to consider debt restructuring, both farmer and lender must do an indepth financial analysis of the farming operation to determine the amount of nonworking debt and the amount of interest and principal that can be paid from the operation under normal conditions. The operation should be analyzed from a profit and loss on production, not on a debt-to-asset ratio. No debt will be forgiven.

Such a plan represents a realistic approach to turning the debt programs around. Land values will stabilize, fewer farmers will be forced out of business and banks will benefit from stronger loan holdings.

Agriculture is much more than food: it includes cotton, wool, forest products, tobacco, greenhouse products, and many others. About one-fourth of prescription drugs contain an agricultural product. We use about 20 pounds of paper per person daily. People spend $5 billion a year on cat and dog food.

Dept. of Interior plans first wild horse, burro expo

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Some people call them "useless broomtails," but adopters from across the nation are invited to prove otherwise by demonstrating the talents and skills of their wild horses and burros at the first All-American Wild Horse and Burro Expo. The combination show and adoption event will be held in Rio Grande, Ohio, from July 3 through 6.

The Expo will be a joint venture between Bob Evans Farms, a private corporation, and the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management (BLM). "We appreciate the support offered by Bob Evans and his staff," BLM Director Robert F. Burford said. "We look forward to an exciting celebration at his Farm."

All animals adopted through BLM's Adopt-A-Horse or Burro Program will be eligible to participate in the show. Approximately 64,000 wild horses and burros have been placed with individuals across the United States since the program began in 1973.

Fifteen events have been scheduled for the July 5 show. Events for adopted horses include Western pleasure, English pleasure, a "Simon says" command class, costume, reining, egg and spoon, trail, flag race, rescue race, flat race, and barrel race. Burro classes are halter, lead line for children, novelty hitch, and costume. The adopters will be vying for cash prizes donated by Bob Evans Farm.

"We are excited about this opportunity to show that wild horses and burros can be trained and shown, just as their domestic counterparts," Burford said. "We hope to convince many more people to adopt these animals."

Approximately 50,400 wild horses and burros roam public lands in the Western States, about twice as many as can be supported by the forage and water resources available to them. Excess animals are gathered by BLM and made available to qualified individuals through the Adopt-A-Horse Program.

"We have about 9,000 excess animals–mostly horses–waiting for adoption now," Burford explained.

Approximately 200 wild horses and 75 wild burros will be available for adoption at the Expo. Qualified individuals may apply at the event, but are encouraged to complete an application in advance to obtain a first choice of animals. Adoptions will begin on July 3 and run through July 6, unless all of the animals are adopted earlier in the weekend.

Other events planned during the Expo are daily demonstrations of adopted animals, horseback riding, wild horse and burro movies, and open forums on adopters' experiences with their wild horses and burros. Food, crafts, exhibits, and other entertainment will be available throughout the weekend.

Additional information, including applications for the Expo horse show and for adoption, is available from the Adopt-A-Horse Program, Bureau of Land Management, Post Office Box 22357, Alexandria, Virginia 22304, or by calling (703) 274-0190.

NO MORE PROMISES.

A promise is like a bubble. It's an easy thing to put into the air.

But try to hold it...keep it, and it disappears.

Farm equipment companies have made too many promises to their dealers. And the economy and mergers have meant that a lot of those promises couldn't be kept. We've changed, too. But while some companies continue to make promises, White Farm has learned that the only way to gain your trust and your business is to stand on the quality of our products.

You'll get quality equipment, not promises. We have a new owner. One that has experience through Bush Hog, Kewanee and New Idea. Allied Products Corporation is investing its funds and its future in farm equipment.

With their support, we'll earn your business by supplying you with quality tractors, planters and tillage equipment. And we'll support the line with a strong parts system and an attentive finance division.

What we do is more important than what we say. The proof of our commitment is rolling off the production line right now. We're restructuring to give you more access to decision makers. We're shifting production to increase plant volume, maintain quality and stay competitive. And we're always learning more about what you need to keep profitable.

Others promise that you'll benefit from their changes. But we'll prove that your future looks best with the unchangeable quality and value of White Farm.
